County's Small Cities 'Detriment To Future'

Planning Called Good But Could Be Better

By WAT TAKESHITA

Marin's small cities were described by a San Francisco planner today as a detriment to the future of the county.

John Blayney, former city planner for San Rafael, now a consultant with the planning firm of Livingston and Blayney, told a crowd of more than 400 at Dominican College, San Rafael, that Marin's planning has been good, but it could be better.

"If you continue to have small cities, you cannot give top quality government services," he said.

Blayney was one of three main speakers leading off the opening session of the all-day conference on Marin and Its Future held in Guzman Hall.

The first panel on "People and Jobs" also had County Supervisors Byron W. Leydecker of San Rafael and Gordon Dohemann, vice president of the Draper Companies as speakers.

Leydecker has previously spoken of the need for a city and county of Marin, but he did not bring up the topic in his talk today.

He said the biggest problem in planning is "economic interest versus total community interests."

"If economics is king, we'll have another Los Angeles or as John (Blayney) mentioned, another San Mateo County," Leydecker said.

He emphasized the need to set up community goals by such means as master planning and other methods like the Stanford Research Institute's current studies on industries compatible in the county.

Blayney agreed with Leydecker's appraisal of the economic conflict.

"The commuter, the footloose resident, he doesn't want any more people in the county. He wants to keep open space next to his home. He wants to maintain status quo, demands higher services. On the other hand, the businessman wants more people, higher density, looser controls and lower development costs," Blayney said.

Tough Budget Session Seen

SACRAMENTO (AP)—California's 119 legislators return to the Capitol Monday for an election-year session—and they're again faced with the biggest budget in the state's history.

Republicans already have declared their opposition to Gov. Edmund G. Brown's 3.66 billion request. Their votes are necessary to move the budget out of the Assembly, since the Democrats have only 51 of the needed 54 votes.

A clue as to the GOP plans may come from this weekend's Sacramento meeting of the GOP State Central Committee.

The legislature will line up this way:

Senate—27 Democrats, 13 Republicans, an exact two-thirds majority; Assembly—51 Democrats, 28 Republicans, one vacancy. The vacancy created by the election of Assemblyman Paul Lunardi, (D-Roseville) to the Senate, won't be filled before the session ends, unless it runs past the June 2 primary, which isn't likely.

The two top legislative leaders face no serious opponents, and are expected to be re-elected, although there is open disgruntlement with Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh. But Sen. Hugh M. Burns, (D-Fresno) has his chair as president pro tem waiting.

Despite opposition from Republicans and a few Democrats who charge he wields too much power, Unruh again apparently will retain the speaker's gavel. Republicans have said they realize the Los Angeles Democrat is a cinch for re-election, and they aren't going to try to buck him.

Running concurrent with the budget session will be special sessions called by the governor to deal with problems he con-

FBI Can't Be Sure On Evers Bullet

JACKSON, MISS. (AP) — An FBI agent testified today that the high-powered rifle bullet which killed Medgar Evers was badly mutilated and it was impossible to say if it was fired from a gun similar to the alleged murder weapon.

Richard Poppleton of Cheverly, Md., an FBI ballistics expert, testified that the bullet which killed Evers, a Negro integration leader, was fired from a rifle similar to the 30-06 rifle the prosecution contends was used to kill Evers.

But he said positive identification was impossible.

Poppleton gave technical testimony linking Byron De La Beckwith with the rifle which the prosecution contends was used to kill Evers.

Poppleton said that farmer I. T. McIntyre turned over to the FBI 53 empty cartridge shells which he said were fired from a rifle he claimed to have traded to Beckwith about four years ago.

Only about 40 spectators were on hand for an unusual Saturday court session for the trial.

Reds Send Plane Wreckage Back

BERLIN (AP)—The wreckage of the U.S. Air Force jet training plane shot down in East Germany was brought to West Berlin today.

Capt. Miles J. McNaughton, in charge of the recovery operations, said his convoy, which included a mortuary team, arrived at the site near the village of Vogelsberg, 125 miles southwest of Berlin, early yesterday morning after a drive of more than nine hours.

McNaughton said recovery of the wreckage began after photographs were taken of the scene. The bodies were returned to West Germany yesterday.

Sims Suggests Further Study On Redistricting

The Marin County Board of Supervisor's last-minute, redistricting was upheld in Superior Court yesterday, but Judge Richard M. Sims Jr. suggested that it be given further study.

Judge Sims denied a taxpayer's suit to compel redistricting commenting that he didn't feel "this was the opportune time to throw out the old or new ordinances and create chaotic conditions."

The supervisors' plan did "very little" to overcome the "drastic deviation" in population between District 4 (West Marin) and the other districts, he said.

The June supervisorial election will be held on the basis of the new supervisoral boundaries approved by supervisors yesterday just in time for the 1 p.m. court deadline.

Attorney John P. Rooney of Larkspur, representing officers of the San Rafael Junior Chamber of Commerce who filed the suit, said the new boundaries did not remedy the imbalance and that he would seek the "same remedies."

Judge Sims dismissed the taxpayers' suit without prejudice against any future action against the new ordinance.

The judge suggested that after the new board of supervisors forms next January, it should again study supervisorial districts.

Under the redistricting, the population of District 4 was increased from 1.7 to 3.9 of the total population.

The taxpayers petition asked that each new district contain at least 18 per cent and not more than 23 per cent of the county's population.

County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney contended that District 4 (West Marin) was a separate and distinct community, rural in nature and separated from other districts by natural boundaries. He claimed that although there was some disproportion of population it was "not as bad as it seemed" be-

2 Suspects Nabbed After San Rafael Burglary Try

Two San Francisco men suspected of the burglary of a San Rafael furniture store and possession of narcotics were arrested last night after a patrolman said he spotted them attempting another break-in.

Joseph Clarence Eams, 26, and Donald William Parker, 30, both of San Francisco, were held today in Marin County Jail on $2,750 bail each. They were charged with burglary, attempted burglary and possession of marijuana.

San Rafael Police Inspector Richard Camper said Officer John Riordan was on patrol on C Street at 3:25 a.m. today when he saw a man run from the doorway of the Van Doyle Complete Home Furnishings store at 921 C and hop into a car.

As the car sped away, Riordan got the license number and put out an all points bulletin. The car, with Eams and Parker in it, was stopped a few minutes later by Corte Madera and Larkspur police on Highway 101 near Corte Madera.

Pry marks on the furniture store door were similar to those found last Jan. 5 when the store was entered, Camper said. At that time, 16 television sets, radios and phonographs were stolen. Camper said it is possible the two men were involved in the earlier burglary.

A cigarette which appeared to be marijuana was found on the front seat of the suspects' car, Camper said.

Witness Admits Using LBJ's Name

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cookware manufacturer Albert G. Young has testified he made use of President Lyndon B. Johnson's name in connection with the television advertising but never talked to Johnson about the transaction.

In testimony made public by the Senate Rules Committee today, Young said that a reference he made to Johnson in a June 11, 1957, letter "was purely a little background music."

The committee is looking into advertising time purchased on an Austin, Tex., television station owned by Johnson's family as part of its conflict-of-interest inquiry into the business dealings of Robert G. Baker.

Baker, a former Johnson protege, resigned last Oct. 7 as secretary to the Senate's Democratic majority. At the time Young's letter was written, Johnson was Senate majority leader.

Young, who testified at a closed hearing yesterday, advertised his cookware products on the station seven years ago under an agreement made with Don B. Reynolds, a local insurance agent with whom Baker was associated.

Reynolds has testified that he bought the TV time at the request of Walter Jenkins, one of Johnson's long-time aides, after writing $100,000 in insurance policies on Johnson's life.

Fisher Finally Gets To Olympics

INNSBRUCK, Austria (UPI)—Singer Eddie Fisher, saying he has "already said more than enough about that other business," arrived today to entertain the Winter Olympic athletes.

He signed autographs steadily.

He said he hoped to give several performances for the athletes from 35 countries at the Olympic Village, and also expects to appear on Eurovision to help promote the games.

Moon Shot Is Right On Course

PASADENA (AP) — Scientists were jubilant today that the camera-packed Ranger 6 spacecraft was heading directly to an area on the moon under consideration for future astronaut landings.

If all goes well, Ranger 6 should hit the moon at 4:24 a.m. (EST) tomorrow.

The spacecraft was launched from Cape Kennedy, Fla., Wednesday. Its course was corrected in midflight early Thursday to aim it within a 150-mile-diameter circle on the flat plain known as Mare Tranquillitatis or the Sea of Tranquility.

In the last 10 minutes of flight, 900 miles before impact, six cameras aboard the spacecraft are supposed to start taking the first of more than 3,000 pictures.

The first photos, radioed in a steady stream to earth, should show surface areas 151,000 and 16,800-square-mile areas, taken by two wide-angle cameras. Areas of 9,480 and 1,950 square miles are the targets of four narrow-angle cameras.

Closeup pictures, just before impact, should show about half a square mile. The wide-angle cameras are to take 117 pictures each, the narrow-angle cameras 714 each.

Al Dark Answers Rumors: 'I Want To Stay With Giants'

A San Francisco newspaper said today there are strong rumors that San Francisco Giants manager Alvin Dark may switch to the Houston Colts after the 1964 season.

In a copyrighted story, the paper said Dark would not deny or confirm the speculation.

Dark shrugged and said, "I want to manage the Giants just as long as they and the people of San Francisco want me here."

Dark said he is selling his home in nearby Atherton and plans to move to Lake Charles, La., his former home.

Dark's Giants contract expires after this season. He's paid better than $45,000 under the contract, signed before the Giants won the 1962 National League pennant.

Under league regulations, it is illegal for a team to offer a job to a man employed by another club.

All Of County Covered By Fog

Soupy fog covered all of Marin early today, but began to lift rapidly by mid-morning.

In West Marin, a thick drizzle came with the fog, leaving a trace of rain at Point Reyes Station.

Marin County Airport reported the fog lifting late this morning. Commodore Helicopter, Inc., with its base on Richardson Bay north of Sausalito reported a ceiling at 800 feet and three-mile visibility by midmorning.

The Weather Bureau predicted fair weather tomorrow with a chance of early morning fog. A storm that dumped an inch of rain at Eureka last night turned inland, missing the Bay Area.

Deputies Break Up Threatened 'Rumble'

A threatened "rumble" between Terra Linda High School students and Hamilton Air Force Base youths failed to come off last night as Marin sheriff's deputies moved in before any fighting started.

Nearly 100 youths gathered at Burge's Drive-In Restaurant at Ignacio, apparently to fight out a "jurisdictional dispute" as to which group included the drive-in in its territory, Deputy Charles Prandi said.

Nobody was arrested, although three high school students, alleged to be ringleaders, were given citations for curfew violation and released to their parents.

"Only one fellow got punched," Prandi said, "before we were able to stop the thing." The youth, David Miller, 18, of 2785 Heatherstone Drive, Marinwood, was examined for an injured mouth at Novato General Hospital.

Prandi said the proposed rumble was the result of arguments last week between a few Terra Linda students and Hamilton base residents, including dependents of base employees and some airmen. "It seems that some of the high school kids later went to the base to get haircuts and at that time they were challenged to a fight," the deputy said.

"It was planned that five students would meet five Hamilton kids at 11:30 p.m. at Burge's and then go to the Nike site on Smith Ranch road to continue the fight."

Some of the youths' girl friends, however, tipped off deputies about the planned fight. Prandi said he told the youths earlier that "we knew all about it, and tried to get them to call it off." He guessed that many of the youths assembled at the drive-in only to watch.

140 Feared Burned In Argentine Train

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — An overnight express train jammed with 1,000 vacationers collided with a stalled freight locomotive today in a thunderous explosion that took a heavy toll of dead and injured.

Officials feared that most of the 140 persons in the first car of the express train were trapped and burned alive. Hours after the accident, rescue crews had pulled only 10 bodies from the twisted and charred wreckage.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Mrs. Kennedy Moves To New Home

The 34-year-old widow and Caroline, 6, and John Jr., 3, move into the 12-room, three-story Federalist-style house at 3017 N Street sometime today.

Moving in with them for a time will be Mrs. Kennedy's sister, Princess Lee Radziwill, and her two youngsters, Anthony, 5, and 2-year-old Anna Christina.

Robinson May Be Entering Politics

NEW YORK (AP) — Jackie Robinson, first Negro in major league baseball, was reported yesterday to be planning a career in politics.

Robinson

His employer, William Black, said Robinson will resign as vice president of a restaurant chain to enter politics.

The New York Herald Tribune said Robinson will join the staff of Republican Nelson Rockefeller in his bid for the presidential nomination.

Graham Says Won't Enter Politics

HOUSTON (UPI) — Evangelist Billy Graham said today he will not run for president and will not accept a presidential draft.

Graham called a news conference this morning to spike rumors that he would get into politics.

He said a copyrighted story in yesterday's Houston Press was true when it said he had given serious thought to pleas by supporters that he be receptive to a possible Republican draft.

But he said he has decided to stay in evangelism.

"I have no intention of entering politics or giving the slightest encouragement to my friends who want me to," Graham said.

Cantor Gets Presidential Citation

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Retired entertainer Eddie Cantor was presented a commendation from President Lyndon B. Johnson yesterday for distinguished service to the United States

Cantor

The presidential citation was read to the comedian in his Hollywood home by Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

The commendation cites Cantor for his services in humanitarian causes. Cantor, 72, has been ill and confined to his home for month.

In Washington today is Rep. James Roosevelt, (D-Calif.), asked Congress to authorize the award of a gold medal to Cantor to "give all the American people an opportunity to share in this expression of high esteem."

Warning On Unity

MANCHESTER, England (AP)—The bishop of Hulme has warned Church of England parishioners against "starry-eyed optimism" on achieving unity with the Roman Catholic Church.

Speaking at Manchester Cathedral yesterday, the Rt. Rev. K. V. Ramsey said: "The arms of the Church of Rome are stretched out more obviously in welcome, but there is to be no going out to meet us halfway. The Roman Catholic Church has shown no signs of self-questioning about doctrines which others find impossible to accept."

Lucy To Quit Show

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Lucille Ball, one of television's most successful stars in a weekly comedy series, has decided not to return to a regular series next fall.

Miss Ball, 52, president of Desilu Productions, Inc., yesterday announced jointly with CBS-TV that she wished to devote more time to business matters and limit her appearances to "television specials and feature motion pictures."

After Wasp Sting

BEAUMONT, Tex. —C. W. Gore, 47, of Nederland, Texas, lies in a coma. He opens his eyes, but apparently knows no one.

For seven months the oilfield worker has been bedfast. His bed is raised and lowered to promote circulation of his blood. He lives on a liquid protein fed into his stomach.

Gore was stung by a wasp last June 8. The insect stung him while he was doing yard work. A policeman said he "had turned blue" when an ambulance arrived.

Trial Of Hoffa

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn (AP)—Government attorneys predict they will complete their jury-tampering charges late next week against Teamsters President James R. Hoffa and five others.

"We definitely expect to finish up next week," said chief prosecutor James Neal of Washington at the conclusion yesterday of the trial's second week before U.S. District Court Judge Frank Wilson.

Funeral For Ladd

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Funeral services will be held today for veteran actor Alan Ladd, although cause of his death still has not been determined.

The services will be conducted a 2:30 p.m. at the Church of the Recessional at Forest Lawn Memorial Park in nearby Glendale.

'Mad Killer' Executed

MOSCOW (AP)—Moscow's "mad killer," Vladimir Ionesyan, who was accused of murdering five persons and raping a girl, has been executed by a firing squad, the Tass news agency reported today.

The 26-year-old Ionesyan terrorized Moscow for two months until he was arrested two weeks ago.

Aid Urged On Family Planning

BERKELEY (AP) — The California State Board of Health has urged cities and counties to offer family planning services at the local level to all who might ask for it.

The board's recommendation, adopted unanimously at Berkeley yesterday, leaves decision on the issue up to local health departments.

A number of local health departments have provided family planning guidance including advice on birth control, for several years.

State Health Director Malcolm Merrill pointed out that local programs can help childless couples who want families as well as giving guidance on spacing offspring.

"There are positive as well as negative aspects," he said. "Problems of sterility, fertility control and genetic counseling should all be part of such services."

Merrill said the state board's recommendation does not specifically suggest dispensation of birth control devices. He added, though, that "local health departments may do so and be within the scope of the recommendation."

The state board's recommendation is similar to declarations issued earlier by the American Public Health Assn. and the California Conference of Local Health Officers.

Brown Denies Faulty Fill Dam Charge

OROVILLE (AP) — A statement that faulty fill might have gone into construction of the Oroville Dam has been denied by Gov. Edmund G. Brown and his water resources director, William E. Warne.

Republican State Sen. Stan Pittman of Oroville said yesterday that he had heard "rumors that some of the junior engineers and some inspectors" on the Oroville job "are not too happy."

Pittman, who said he would ask for a Senate probe of the construction material, asserted after Warne had backed the material on the job:

"They may have corrected it by now—if there was anything wrong."

The huge Oroville Dam is a key unit of the state water project.

Brown quickly denied Pittman's statement of possible faulty material, calling reports to that effect "irresponsible and erroneous." But he added he welcomed an investigation.

The governor said he checked with Warne and was "completely satisfied that inspection procedures are of the highest order."

Warne stated: "Our inspections . . . do not show any substandard material issued . . . I had this thing looked into once and that's the answer I got."

The water director added that he didn't object to an investigation.

3 Plead Innocent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three men accused of kidnaping Frank Sinatra Jr. last December have pleaded innocent in federal court.

Judge William East accepted the pleas yesterday and also granted a bail reduction from $50,000 to $30,000 for Joseph C. Amsler, 23. The same reduction earlier was granted the other two defendants, Barry Worthington Keenan, 23, and John Irwin, 42.

Earlier, Judge East denied motions for suppression of evidence, which included defendants' statements to FBI agents, money allegedly paid as ransom for young Sinatra, and a letter written by Keenan.

Shriver For Bobby

WASHINGTON (AP)—Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver says he doesn't think he's going to get the Democratic vice presidential nomination.

And, with a bow in the direction of brother-in-law Robert F. Kennedy, he says the attorney general would be a "terrific" choice.

Shriver's comments on one of Washington's favorite guessing games—President Lyndon B. Johnson's likely running mate—were elicited by newsmen yesterday after he told the House Foreign Affairs Committee he needs 115 million dollars to run the Peace Corps the next fiscal year.

Shots Wreck Marin City Street Lights

Marksmen with B-B guns went on a spree in Marin City Thursday night knocking out several street lights, and firing at windows and at the front of the Manzanita School.

Sheriff's deputies investigating the shooting believe it was the work of juveniles.

The sheriff's office received numerous calls of the B-B gun firing starting at 6:44 p.m. until 11:03 p.m. when Earl Parks of 35 Cole Drive said he thought it should end because "there's no lights remaining."

The Marin County Fire Station at Marin City reported firing near the station at 9 p.m.

Leonard O. Robertson, electrical superintendent for Pacific Gas and Electric Co. said he had no report yet on the number of lights damaged.

Destiny In Space Is Seen For Man

"Man's Destiny in Space," was discussed last night by Chan P. Thomas of Los Angeles before a Dining-In at Cloud 5 Restaurant in Novato.

More than 80 officers and guests of the Headquarters Western Communications Region, the 1902 Communication Squadron and Detachment 3, Air Force Communication Squadron from Hamilton Air Force Base attended the affair.

Thomas, president of Chan, Inc., of Los Angeles is the only individual in science today to have conducted intensive research on the "Earth Tumbling Theory."

He has conducted research in the fields of stratigraphy, vertebrate paleontology, radiology, oceanography, glaciology, seismology, paleonphilology, earth magnetism, anthropology and related fields.

His studies of earthquake prediction resulted in his accurate forecasts in 1959 of the major African earthquake, Chilean earthquake in 1960 and Iranian earthquake of 1962.

Chan, Inc. has conducted research in the earth sciences for the Air Force. He was a project engineer on the Rascal Missile guidance system and the A-4D Skyhawk.

San Rafael Planners Must Settle Dispute

An impasse in attempts for a compromise between Draper Companies and the Terra Linda Valley Property Owners Assn. will have to be settled by the San Rafael Planning Commission, association president Robert F. Loberg has stated in a letter to the commission.

The association is fighting a proposal by the developers of the Northgate Shopping Center to build an apartment project of 1,200 units on the hill behind the commercial area.

The association letter states that some compromises have been reached, with the assurance the greenery buffer zone would be at least 75 feet wide and that apartments near Corte Pacheco would be placed further north.

The major concession was realignment of roads, allowing two exits from the project onto Northgate Drive.

But the group still believes the density is too high, especially near the single family homes south of the hill, according to Loberg. Copies of the letter have been circulated among Terra Linda residents with a request that they appear at the commission meeting Tuesday.

Studies Start On Flooding

Formal project studies have been started on the Corte Madera Creek flood control project, the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers has informed Marin County officials.

Acting district engineer Capt. Donald A. Wisdom has asked that the county take steps to insure that new projects in the area of the creek are controlled so that project costs will not rise sharply by the time congress gets around to appropriating funds for construction.

In 1961, when preliminary studies were made, the cost of the job was estimated at $6,950,000, including work on Fairfax Creek. Of that, the federal government would pay $5,770,000, mainly for construction costs. Local jurisdictions would have to provide the rest.

The local cost will mostly consist of purchase of right of way, including an area for disposal of fill. It will also include replacement of many bridges and utility wires and pipelines.

Three Teen Girls Are Injured In Mill Valley Crash

Three teen-aged girls were injured in a two-car collision late yesterday on East Blithedale Avenue at Kipling Drive in Mill Valley.

Deborah Nelson, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anshall Nelson, 261 Ricardo Road, Strawberry Point, Mill Valley, was treated at Marin General Hospital for a left eyebrow laceration and right knee cut and transferred to Kaiser Hospital in San Francisco.

Her sister, Susan, 13, was treated for a fractured nose, slight concussion and a bruised right eyebrow. She also was transferred to Kaiser.

Lesley Creed, 16, of 27 King Street, Mill Valley, was treated at Marin General Hospital for facial cuts and released.

Mill Valley police said the three girls in the Nelson vehicle driven by Deborah, were traveling west about 7:15 p.m. and struck the rear of a car driven by Mill Valley City Councilman George Dominic Monardo, 42, of 50 Millay Place, Mill Valley. He was uninjured and no citations were issued, police said.

Hub City Candidate Is Sales Manager

Duane C. Ragan, 52, of 457 Laurel Avenue, San Anselmo, who took out nomination petitions to run for the San Anselmo City Council yesterday, is sales manager of the Food Merchandizer Corp. in San Rafael.

Yesterday's story in the Independent-Journal incorrectly identified him as an employee of the Armour Meat Co. The story also incorrectly stated he had lived in Marin seven years. He has been a Marin resident for nine years.

Weissich Is Backing Goldwater

William O. Weissich, San Rafael attorney and former Marin County district attorney, will head the official Goldwater For President Committee in the county.

Weissich's appointment as chairman of the committee for Arizona Sen. Barry Goldwater was announced today by William F. Knowland, state chairman for the Goldwater campaign.

Goldwater, 55, who is seeking the Republican nomination for president, is expected to make two Marin appearances between now and the June primaries, Weissich disclosed. The exact dates and places are not yet determined.

"Californians for Goldwater Clubs have been very active in Marin since last June," Weissich said. "These will be incorporated in the Goldwater For President committee."

Goldwater clubs have been active in Novato, Mill Valley, San Rafael and Tiburon, Weissich said. He said committee headquarters will be established as soon as a suitable location can be found.

BUDGET

siders too pressing to wait for next year's general session. Items proposed for legislation on the special agenda include tax cuts, tidelands oil, billboard control and rapid transit.

As a comparison with California, the next largest state in population and budget—New York—is considering a 2.92-billion-dollar budget at its current session.

The New York Legislature convenes in regular session each January, usually staying at Albany for at least three months. In contrast, California's legislative body meets for a six-month general session in odd-numbered years, and for no more than a month in even-numbered years for budget consideration. A special call can keep them in session dealing with non-budget items.

It is expected that the session beginning Monday will recess on Wednesday after committees are formed and the budget officially is in their hands. They'll return early in March, but the date of final adjournment will hinge on how controversial and heated the session becomes.

Republicans, however, won't forget that their national convention begins July 13 in San Francisco, and all legislators are up for re-election this November, so they'll want to be at home campaigning as much as possible.

FUTURE

Shopping Center will make local merchants who have been non-competitive, more competitive.

Dohemann said his company puts the education and recreation of youth at the top of its list of needs for the county.

He also cited the needs for more medical facilities and master planning for tideland development. However, he said he opposes any four-year moratorium on bay filling. Dohemann praised Supervisors Leydecker and Peter H. Behr for starting "a new trend in Marin government."

"We need more people like them," he said.

This brought a big round of applause from the crowd.

Conference chairman Margaret Azevedo announced that the crowd was more than double what she expected.

The conference was to continue all day, to discuss items like transportation, green-belt zoning and private rights.

Sponsors of the session were the leagues of women voters of Central and Southern Marin, the Marin Conservation League, the Marin Council of Civic Affairs and the Marin County Development Assn.

Man Falls Asleep –Starts Blaze

A Sausalito man who fell asleep with a burning cigarette in his hand escaped injury yesterday after the cigarette started a fire in his apartment.

Sausalito fire department credited the early report from a neighbor with saving the life of Robert Woldhen of Apt. 3 at 314 Main Street. Mrs. Joseph Enxenperger, manager of a neighboring apartment, saw smoke coming from the building and called the fire deparment at 5:10 p.m.

'Comrades' Invents Sugar Cane Harvester

MOSCOW (AP)—Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro says he and Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev invented a new sugar cane harvester now being tested in Cuba, Pravda reported today.

The Soviet Communist party newspaper said Castro visited the test site and congratulated Soviet engineers on the success of the machine.

PROMOTED—Billy C. Means has been promoted to Colonel in the 349th Troop Carrier Wing at Hamilton Air Force Base. Colonel Means serves fulltime as the director of operations for the local Air Force Reserve unit. He and his wife, Barbara, and their four children, live at 45 Paladini Road, Novato.

Bolinas Plan Group Adds Two Members

Two new members were added to the master plan committee of the Bolinas Community, Inc., in the regular meeting at Bolinas Community Center last night.

They are Derek Parmenter and John Page. Other members are Remington Wood and Ernest Mendenhall. President John W. Hamilton said need for more extensive zone planning resulted in doubling committee membership.

Hamilton also said the fourman park and recreation committee was urged last night to arrange a meeting with Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission to discuss Bolinas park needs.

The second in a series of town forums sponsored by Bolinas Community, Inc., will be at 8 p.m. next Saturday at the center. Hamilton said members of Bolinas Public Utility District have been asked to present problems of water and sewage and to answer questions from the audience.

County Planner B. D. Dobbs said that District 4, which comprises half the land area of the county, is an area of potential growth, mainly recreational. He estimated that it would be from 12 to 15 years before District 4 would be equal in population to the four other supervisorial districts in the county.

Maloney said the supervisors acted in good faith and there was no "abuse of discretion" in setting up the new boundaries. "As required the board has made an effort to increase the population of the area," he said.

The gain in District 4 was achieved by adding Bolinas and Stinson Beach from District 3 (Southern Marin) and Nicasio and the San Geronimo Valley from District 5 (North Marin).

There were no changes in the boundaries of District 1 (San Rafael) and District 2 (Ross Valley).

The population of District 4 was increased from 2,975 to 6,969 by the redistricting which will become effective 30 days from yesterday.

Under the new boundaries the population percentages are: District 1, 26.6; District 2, 29.9; District 3, 23.1; District 4, 3.9; and District 5, 16.5.

$75 Stolen From Service Station

Burglars smashed a window and took credit card receipts and $75 in cash from the Bret Harte Richfield Service Station at 616 Irwin Street, San Rafael, early yesterday, police reported.

Station owner Joseph F. Castro said the cash was taken from a drawer in a store room. Also missing were between $400 and $500 in Richfield credit card receipts, which he said are of no value to anyone but himself. He asked for their return. The loss is not covered by insurance.

Police said a blunt instrument was used to smash a sliding glass door on the lubrication room. The theft, they said, was apparently committed by someone "who was familiar with the interior of the building."

Marin Junior College District trustee Robert E. Oliver said Thursday night insurance firms had estimated the "depreciated value" of the College of Marin gymnasium, destroyed by fire Dec. 16, at $143,000. A typographical error in yesterday's Independent-Journal made the figure read $134,000.

OBITUARIES

Charles Grimmer Succumbs

Charles Lancelot Grimmer, 77, of 34 Greenfield Avenue in San Rafael, died of apparent natural causes early today in his home.

The Marin County coroner's office said Grimmer, a retired plumber after 40 years work in San Francisco, complained last night of an abdominal pain. About 5 a.m. today he had respiratory trouble and a physician was called by the family.

Grimmer was dead on arrival of the doctor, the coroner's office said.

A native of Oakland, Grimmer came to Marin County two years ago. He was a member of Marin Rod and Gun Club, and a veteran of World War I with service in France.

Survivors are the wife, Anna; two sisters, Mrs. Beulah Vetrano, San Francisco, and Mrs. Della Shepherd, Alameda; two step-sons, Norman E. Buller, Greenbrae, and Ernest J. Buller, Hayward; and a stepdaughter, Mrs. Dorothy Hansen, Fairfax.

Funeral arrangements are pending at Hogan and Sullivan Funeral Home in San Francisco.

MRS. HAWXHURST

Mrs. Beatrice Hawxhurst, 50, a housekeeper residing at 110 Laurel Place in San Rafael, died in her room early today.

The Marin County coroner's office said she retired about 11 p.m. yesterday and apparently died about 2 a.m.

A friend discovered her body this morning. An autopsy was to be permormed at Williams Mortuary today.

The coroner's office said Mrs. Hawxhurst had been ill for some time, and was released only a few weeks ago from San Rafael General Hospital.

Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Linda Jean Gaither, San Rafael, and Mrs. Judy Hacker, San Anselmo. Funeral arrangements are pending.

ROGER WALCH

Funeral services were held in Hanford, Kings County, today for attorney Roger R. Walch, father of Mrs. W. Strother Jones of San Anselmo.

Walch, former district attorney of Kings County, was once the youngest district attorney in the county's history. He was elected to the office at the age of 29 in 1934. He held the job until 1946 when he retired to enter private practice.

He died of cancer Tuesday at the age of 59.

He was a native of Medford, Mass., and a graduate of Harvard Law School.

In addition to his daughter, he leaves his wife, Charlotte of Hanford; a sister, Mrs. Raymond Ross of Los Angeles; his father, Herman Walch of Los Angeles, and three grandchildren.

WILL MASON

Will D. Mason, a 43-year resident of Mill Valley, died yesterday at a local hospital following a two-week illness.

He had worked 43 years as a sanitary engineer for the State of California at the University of California Hospital, now the medical center, retiring in 1948. He lived at 144 Sycamore Avenue.

Eighty-one years old, Mason was born in Humboldt County. He was a member of Golden Gate Masonic Lodge No. 30; California Bodies Scottish Rite, and Local 38 of the United Association of Journeymen Plumbers of San Francisco.

Mason is survived by his wife, Millie E. Mason, and a son, Will G. Mason of Mill Valley.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p.m. Monday at Russell and Gooch Mortuary, Mill Valley, under the auspices of Golden Gate Lodge No. 30. Inurnment will be at Woodlawn Cemetery, Colma.

V. S. HARRINGTON

Verne S. Harrington, 77, of 35 Shell Road, Mill Valley, died late last night in a local convalescent hospital following a lengthy illness.

The Marin County coroner's office said an autopsy will be performed at Chapel of the Hills, San Anselmo. Death was apparently by natural causes.

Harrington, an employee in the installation department of Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. for 35 years, fractured a hip in a fall from a ladder in his garage last July, and had been in hospitals since.

He entered the convalescent hospital Jan. 22.

A native of Harvard, Neb., he came to California in 1926 and to Marin County in 1950. He was a member of the Christian Science Church in Boston, Mass.

PEARL BURCHEALL

Mrs. Pearl E. Burcheall, 80, who resided in an apartment at Fifth and Mission Avenues, in San Rafael, died yesterday in a local hospital following a lengthy illness.

A native of Middletown, Lake County, she came to Marin County about 50 years ago. She taught music for several years and was a graduate of the College of the Pacific, Stockton, now the University of Pacific.

Survivors are two sisters, Isabella Sawtell of San Bruno and Nellie Hannan, San Francisco.

Funeral services will be at 5 p.m. Tuesday at Keaton's Chapel in San Rafael. Interment will be private.

FROM GRIFFE

'Parachute Straps' On Scene

PARIS (UPI)—To have a natural waistline or not is the question in the Paris fashion shows. Designer Jacques Griffe played it both ways by putting women into "parachute straps."

Griffe, who has a large clientele of avid French fans, kept to his usual slim, loose-waisted and uncluttered line.

But he jumped into the current waist controversy by adding a variety of half-belts dangling in front, in back or crossing in front like straps parachute jumpers wear.

SUITS, both in daytime light wool and linen and late afternoon printed silks or evening lame, had loosely hanging half-belts in back. One one checked wool the half-belt continued around to the front to become an inset "parachute strap" piece that crossed over the bosom in an "X" shape.

Griffe used this same parachute strap design on a narrow, loose, and sleeveless navy wool dress, and even on several straight coats.

TO AVOID actually belting the waist at its natural spot, he also designed "hide and seek" belts. On a yellow nubby tweed jacket, a wide black leather half-belt in back vanished at the side but appeared in front with a huge buckle. Underneath the jacket was a slim bare-backed yellow halter dress.

A blue-and-black checked fitted coat had a blue belt threaded through the fabric in back and continuing in front to form an "X". Underneath the model wore a sleeveless dress with demure white collar, a huge bow under the chin, half-belt in back and accordion pleated skirt.

GRIFFE also showed a series of jumper dresses with chiffon blouses. Matching jackets had wide patent leather belts threaded around the waist.

Some suit skirts were narrow and straight, others pleated. Griffe kept shoulders natural and suit jackets collarless, or with narrow collars and lapels.

COCKTAIL dresses, too, stuck to the narrow, slim look that French women like. Some "little black dresses" were low-cut in front, others were partly bare in back.

In a collection of hostess slacks and outfits, one model tinkled through the showroom in a white crocheted full skirt covered with tiny gold bells. Her blouse was a long-sleeved, high-necked black jersey.

DESIGNER Philippe Venet unveiled his spring line, always popular with American buyers.

The Venet coats, usually his best-selling item, were straight. Some were narrow; others had more fullness so they could be wore over suits.

The coats either had small rolled-over collars or were collarless. Shoulders were slightly squared, but not padded.

THE HOUSE of Dior featured a "sub-deb" look of little schoolgirl fitted suits and ruffly dresses. This sketch shows the general line of the Christian Dior collection shown in Paris. (UPI Photo)

SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER

"Seems like I'm always changing the regular presser foot and zipper foot back and forth. Why can't I use the zipper foot for all my sewing?"

Mrs. M. E. R.

Dear Mrs. M.E.R.:

I had the same thought and tried it, and I don't believe it works as well. I think you need the little extra edge of the regular presser foot to help hold your fabric firm. It seems that with the zipper foot, you don't have the same control of your fabric. Try it, and I think you'll agree with me.

With so many women knitting these days, I'll put a little hint in "Sew Simple" that involves sewing instructions in your knitting.

Since your knits don't have the same firmness that you find in most fabrics, some of the larger-stitched, loosely-knitted garments have the tendency to stretch at the neck and shoulders, thus pulling the sleeves down too far.

Pin a piece of hem tape (same color as garment) from the armhole, to the neck edge (easing in the shoulders slightly), continue across the back of the neck, again ease a little, and on to the other armhole. This tape will cover the shoulder seams. After you have tried on the sweater and are satisfied with the fit, hand whip both edges of the tape to the sweater. Your knitted garment will always retain this shape.

Add a strip of velvet (with the pile side out) to the inside waistband of every skirt to keep your blouses from slipping out. P.S. I used this idea for the inside waistband of my slacks and it really does work.

Mrs. Helen B. Mohaupt, Woodbury, Conn., is this week's winner of a tailor trix pressing board for this winning suggestion.

"You so clearly explain the rudiments and tricks of the trade that you indeed make sewing so simple. I thought perhaps you might like to pass these three little thoughts on to your readers since they helped me so much.

1. "I became a seamstress instead of an amateur when I realized that ripping the mistakes were necessary — they can't be covered up.

2. "When I learned to handle my materials like robins' eggs, then my garments lost that made by loving hands at home look.

3. "Blessed is the man that marries a woman who can sew, for she gives him a rare gift.

"Now for my question: I have trouble hemming my wool skirts that are flared out in the new A-shape. I gather the edge of the hem and pull it up so it lies flat, however, when I press the hem, these deep marks show on the outside of my skirt. Please help me with these hems."

Mrs. M. G. M.

Dear Mrs. M. G. M.:

Many thanks for your clever letter, hope it gives all our readers a lift as it gave me.

As to the hem, you have begun the right way by stitching a long stitch at the edge of the hem. Next, pull your threads so that each section fits perfectly. You must always allow a little ease in the hem, so don't pull your thread too tight.

Before you begin pressing, place a piece of cardboard (that has been slightly curved at the lower edge) under your turned up hem. Now you can press and steam your hem until it lies flat. In wool, almost all of the extra fabric will actually shrink out. I think you will find that you will have no marks from the hem showing on the right side of the garment. This can be done with straight hems as well. Lastly, hand whip the hem in place with small, loose stitches.

"A 4-H Group"

Dear Group:

Since some sleeves have a dropped shoulderline and it is difficult to measure accurately, I proceed to stitch the sleeve in the armhole and try it on. Bend your arm and check the dart placement. The dart or the center of the ease, should come at the elbow when the arm is bent.

Please let me hear from you, an old tip to you may be a new tip for others. Send your letters to "Sew Simple," in care of the Independent-Journal.

She Aims To Remove Stigma The Woman Driver Now Has

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Mrs. Donna Zink doesn't like the stigma that goes along with the phrase "women driver." She is going to do something about it.

Mrs. Zink has been selected by the Nationwide Safety Centers Corp. to initiate a program designed to teach women—more than 50 per cent of the drivers—how to take care of their automobiles and become better drivers.

MRS. ZINK HAS already begun a series of speaking engagements to various women's clubs and organizations in Southern California. Within the next few months she will be speaking throughout the western part of the country.

Mrs. Zink explains basic rules of maintenance of the automobile. She also gives tips on safe driving, road hazards and automobile economy.

Mrs. Zink sums up her role in this program by saying—"My objective is to teach women how to stay alive."

"WOMEN HAVE JUST as much responsibility if not more than the men do when it comes to driving," she said.

"Women drive the children around more than men do, and if for no other reason than this, they should be able to handle a car as well as a man."

Mrs. Zink said that before the time of the super highways and freeways, and before the family car was made to go more than 50 miles per hour, driving was a simple project.

"NOW IT IS A SKILL just to stay alive and in one piece," she said.

"Most women know so little about what makes a car run, and how to keep it running properly," she said.

"So long as the average woman can get in, turn the key and step on the gas, she is satisfied.

"Any woman could be a fairly good driver if that were all she had to worry about. But Mrs. Zink said that when the average woman goes into a service station, the only thing she thinks about is filling the tank with gasoline.

Kiwis Plan 'Get Acquainted'

Mrs. Paul L. McGovern of San Rafael has been elected president of the newly-formed chapter of Golden Gate Kiwis, former American Airline Stewardesses.

The organization, which derives its name from the New Zealand Kiwi bird which doesn't fly, meets on the first Wednesday of each month at 8 p.m.

Other officers of the group include the Mesdames Edward J. McFetridge, vice president; Donald F. DeLong, secretary; James G. Coffman, treasurer; Daniel Goldfein, corresponding secretary and Donald Stutzman, historian.

Friends Of Library To Hear New Plans

Mrs. William Wachter will be hostess at a coffee Monday morning at the Alta Mira Hotel preceding the meeting of the Sausalito Friends of the Library.

President Mrs. Donald J. Duncan Jr. says that officers will be nominated, reports given and plans discussed for meetings through May. Sausalito librarian Mrs. Cynthia B. Willcox will outline the role of the Friends of the Library in creating a new library.

Among reports to be given will be those on the Dec. 15 workshop in San Francisco and the Jan. 9 meeting at the home of Mrs. James J. Carroll regarding plans for a new library.

St. Nicholas Circle Names New Officers

Mrs. Kenneth Elkington has been elected the new president of St. Nicholas Circle of Christ Church, Sausalito. Mrs. Emerson Burnett, last years' president, will serve as vice president.

St. Nicholas Circle was formed a year and a half ago to work on projects for the Sunday School.

Mrs. Elkington has taught Sunday School for several years and her children, Claire, 9, Christopher, 7, and Scott, 5, are active Sunday schoolers.

Guild Will See Dedication Slides

A colored slide show will be presented by Sister Adele of the Dominican Order at the Tuesday meeting of St. Isabella's Women's Guild.

The slide collection includes views of Dominican College and Novitiate and St. Isabella's parish dedication ceremonies. Sister Adele will begin the program at 8 p.m.

Following the Women's Guild meeting, members of the Altar Guild will meet in the school library.

Newly Married Richard Codys Being Honored At Reception

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

Mr. and Mrs. Richard George Cody, who were recently married, are being honored today at a reception at Sabella's. It is being given by Dianna Cody's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon L. Dokken of Marinwood. Dianna and Richard were married at a church ceremony in Reno in December. Dianna is a graduate of San Rafael High School. Richard, son of Mrs. Charles E. Cody of Mill Valley, a graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School, attended College of Marin. He is employed by Stauffer Chemical Co. and he and his bride are making their home in Mountain View. Invited to the reception were 50 guests.

ADDED to the list of cocktail party guests before the Valentine Ball of Marin Inter City Council of Beta Sigma Phi are many more guests. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Schau and Mr. and Mrs. Hershel Johnson are entertaining at the Glenwood home of the Schaus. Guests will be Messrs. and Mesdames Dale Frady, Walter Schau, Henry Rossio, Arthur Trueman, Abe Chavez and Robert Hauge.

Mr. and Mrs. Gavin Pelling have invited a group of friends for cocktails and hors d'oeuvres before the ball at their home in Novato. Their guest list includes Messrs. and Mesdames Richard Hammond, Warren Overlid, Gerard Enright, Edmond Webber, David Faraday, Thomas McEneany and Leo Benelli.

MR. AND MRS. Anthony Montalbano of Point Reyes were honored at a dinner party recently at the Chief Petty Officers Club at Treasure Island. Ocasion for the party was the Montalbanos' wedding anniversary. They were married 25 years ago at SS. Peter and Paul Church in San Francisco. The tables were centered with silver candelabra and silver money trees.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM T. BRANTMAN, who have a beautiful home fronting the bay in Tiburon, have bought a studio apartment in the Fontana, Van Ness Avenue and North Point Street in San Francisco. This is a studio apartment where Bill and his wife will stay when they are in San Francisco to attend parties or shows at night. There is a possibility, too, that Mrs. Brantman will go to the apartment to change her attire when she is going to a luncheon in San Francisco or to a matinee. Anyway there are all sorts of prospective uses for the pied-a-terre.

A CHARLIE BROWN theme was carried out last night at the birthday party given at the Alan Dohrmann home on Tamal Vista Drive in San Rafael for Mrs. Dohrmann's son, Carl Sampson, in celebration of his birthday. Mr. Dohrmann assisted his wife in greeting and entertaining Carl's friends, mostly his sixth grade classmates at West End School. The decorations were inspired by the Charlie Brown newspaper cartoons. Dancing and games preceded and followed the serving of the colorfully decorated birthday cake and ice cream.

JILL WEISSICH, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William O. Weissich of San Rafael, has been enjoying much travel. Last summer she stayed in Europe after completing her course at the Sorbonne in France, seeing many countries. Now she and her chum, Mary Langbehn of San Rafael, are in Mexico. They visited Mazatlan, which they loved, went to Guadalajara, Mexico City and Taxco and are now in Acapulco. They will return to Mexico City and then go to San Miguel Allende for a week. They will go back to Mazatlan for the gay pre-Lenten fiestas.

The Weissichs' two younger children, Bill and Lise, are enjoying today as guests of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Weissich of Mill Valley. They had luncheon at the St. Francis Hotel and are attending famous Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, "The Sound of Music," this afternoon at the Curran Theater.

Capes Everywhere

Capes are seen everywhere in the spring fashion collections. Trend-setting designers put them on suit jackets, dresses, coats. They ranged from elbow to longer lengths and tended to be more molded than billowy.

BURGLAR GIVES ADVICE FOR FAMILY TO KEEP HOME SAFER

HOUSTON (UPI)—A burglar in jail interviewed his cellmate recently and then wrote a story for all who want to keep their homes safer.

The cellmate, with 15 years' experience at breaking and entering, confessed that today's homes aren't so burglar-proof.

To improve the situation, he suggested:

—Make sure you have a good set of locks with dead bolt mechanisms that cannot be opened with a strip of celluloid.

—If you must hide a spare key outside the house hide it at least 10 feet from the door.

—When you go out, leave at least one light on in the house. The best place: the bathroom.

—Keep a record of serial numbers of all guns, cameras, typewriters, and appliances to expedite insurance claims in case anything's lifted by a crook.

—Dogs are excellent burglar insurance. If you take your canine with you when you leave home, make certain his empty kennel is not conspicuous.

Italian Catholic Federation To Hold Mardi Gras Dance

Chairman for the 7 p.m. event is Mrs. Armondo Pelleriti with Mrs. Ernest Valenti, co-chairman.

Other committee members include Mesdames Amerino Menchini, buffet; Anglo Petri, Ernest Giono, decorations, and Duilio Artigiani, Frank Philipps, Mario Sactorio, Peter Arrigoni, Vincent Giovannoni, Joseph Scafidi and Joseph Bersano.

Prizes will be awarded for the best Mari Mardi Gras costume.

Childish Tips Help In Design Changes

CHICAGO (UPI) — Of the 200 new toys put on the market this year, only two will still be sold after five years, according to toy industry estimates.

Most toys last no more than three years in popularity. Yet, a bundle of spools and sticks called a "tinkertoy" continues after 50 years to ride a crest of popularity.

"If all the tinkertoy sets manufactured could be assembled, they would form a bridge from New York to London," said Ernest W. Heilmann, general manager of Toy Tinkers, Inc., manufacturers of tinkertoys.

"We don't know how many sets have been sold — nobody knows," Heilmann, a native of Waltham, Mass. said. "But we are sure that millions of youngsters have played with tinker toys and have done their first building with them, their first constructive work, you might say."

TINKERTOYS were invented by Charles H. Pajeau, an Evanston, Inn. tombstone manufacturer. He based the invention on his observation that children enjoy learning, but dislike being taught, and that every child likes to take things apart and put them back together.

Today, more than a million sets of tinkertoys are packaged each year. They have changed little from the first sets made, except that color has been added for different lengths of dowels and spools. The color permits pre-schoolers who have not learned to read to follow color-coded directions.

"The reason for the success of tinkertoys is simple," Heilmann said.

Guild To Hold Sponsor Luncheon

Members of the Holy Family Guild and friends of the Sisters of the Holy Family will be welcomed at the Sponsor Luncheon to be held at 12:30 p.m., on Feb. 11 at St. Sebastian's Hall, Greenbrae.

Proceeds from the luncheon will go to the annual contribution presented to Mother Perpetua at the Noviate at Mission San Jose in June.

Guests will be greeted by Mrs. Arthur Luchetti, president.

Reservations chairman are Mesdames Harold Bates, Harry Clark and F. J. Buscher.

Rockefeller Turns Out To Be Friendly, Down-To-Earth

YOU MIGHT SAY that Governor Rockefeller made his first change in campaign plans as the result of his experiences in Marin. He indicated that he came here with the intention of shaking every hand offered. But after an hour and a half of steady handshaking at Peacock Gap Tuesday night it became apparent that he could not stay long enough to meet everybody personally without missing his train for Los Angeles. A change of plans was indicated. So he gave up and stepped up on a platform to greet the throngs en masse.

It was kind of a production-line operation. After Rockefeller introduced Happy and spoke briefly, Senator Jack McCarthy and Assemblyman Bill Bagley, co-hosts for the reception, would take the microphone to plead with the crowd to leave so as to admit another houseful from the long line waiting outside.

EVEN THE MOST optimistic among Rockefeller's supporters and staff were bowled over by the throngs that showed up to see the presidential hopeful here in Marin.

They had hoped for a big crowd. But they didn't dream that the turnout would be so overwhelming. The large press corps accompanying the Rockefellers on this first 1964 campaign visit to California likewise was bowled over by the size and enthusiasm of the Marin throng.

HOW DOES THE Governor size up his chances for the G.O.P. presidential nomination? Does he have a chance against Goldwater or any of the others who are occasionally mentioned as possibilities?

It all depends on the outcome of certain key primary elections, he tells you. And he mentions specifically New Hampshire (March 10), Oregon (May 15), and California (June 2).

The candidate who doesn't win these three, he says, is "dead"; that is, he cannot go on to win the G.O.P. nomination if he suffers defeat in these three key contests.

HOW DOES ROCKEFELLER plan to go about campaigning in these three states?

He will concentrate on pointing out the differences between his views and those of Senator Goldwater, he says, launching almost enthusiastically into a recitation of Goldwater's expressed aims of withdrawing from the United Nations, ending foreign aid and abolishing the graduated income tax. His disagreement with Goldwater's "far out" ideas is implicit.

AT THE MOMENT he is campaigning principally against Goldwater for the Republican nomination, so he does not go further than to observe that the Republican party can achieve victory in 1964 by offering workable solutions to problems facing the nation "which the present administration has not been able to solve."

He leaves you with the feeling that after he has won the G.O.P. nomination, he will get down to brass tacks on specific proposals for curing some of the nation's ills.

As an aside, this is the impression that Richard Nixon gave in times past; but Nixon never got very specific in subsequent campaigning.

CAN THE GOVERNOR give sufficient time and effort to campaigning in California?

After the New Hampshire primary and after the New York legislative session is over, he will be able to spend all the time that is necessary in California and Oregon, he tells you.

WHAT KIND OF A GUY is Nelson Rockefeller to talk with?

He is friendly, down-to-earth and unlike some pompous governors I have met. At times, just for a moment, he reminds you of Will Rogers in appearance and speech.

Nixon never seemed at ease in a receiving line. He acted like he wished he didn't have to meet all the people.

Rockefeller obviously enjoys meeting people. So does Happy. Her smile is infectious.

IT WAS SAID among the press corps that the Rockefeller campaign brain trust had selected Marin as a test area for an initial appearance in California.

If what happened here is likely to be repeated over the rest of the state, Rockefeller will score a decisive win over Goldwater in the California primary.

Bouquets And Brickbats

A BOUQUET to President William A. Henderson Jr. and Vice President Donald L. Ronsheimer of the San Rafael Junior Chamber of Commerce for "taking the bull by the horns," bringing legal action to force realignment of Marin supervisorial districts. Their elders can take a leaf from the book of these young fellows.

BOUQUETS to each of the 1,000 or so men and women who gave of their time and energy to conduct the "Mothers' March of Dimes" Tuesday night. We hope their combined efforts bore fruit, we hope the March of Dimes fund was swelled.

BOUQUETS to those responsible for arranging "The Negro In The Schools" series of meetings for teachers being held at Tam High. It is easy enough to say that segregation has no proper place in our nation today, but the people in charge need some guidelines when social integration begins at school; otherwise, integration may suffer a setback.

BRICKBATS to police who permit a "comedy of errors" to allow the antics of a city councilman to go unreported.

A BOUQUET to the National Park Service for opening a portion of the Pt. Reyes National Seashore to the public. The only justification for acquiring large tracts of property for public parks is their usefulness to the public. We are glad the usefulness of Pt. Reyes National Seashore has begun.

BRICKBATS to the young hot rodders who feel it necessary to cruise up and down congested Fourth Street in San Rafael, especially on Friday nights when the stores are open. They occasionally make matters worse by tying up traffic while they lean out of windows to hold gabfests. They are only kids and they are entitled to act like it, but they ought to be courteous enough to stay out of the way of people with serious chores to perform. In other words, youngsters, grow up!

SHEEP DON OVERCOATS

Putting overcoats on his 3,000 sheep is one English farmer's way of protecting them against wintry blasts and producing a better grade of wool.

During a severe cold snap, he provided some of his sheep with a special covering. The results of the experiment were so satisfactory that he decided to outfit all of them with coats of jute sacking that he had made at 70 cents each in an Edinburgh factory.

"They not only keep the sheep snug and warm," the farmer said, "but they make the fleece thicker and softer."

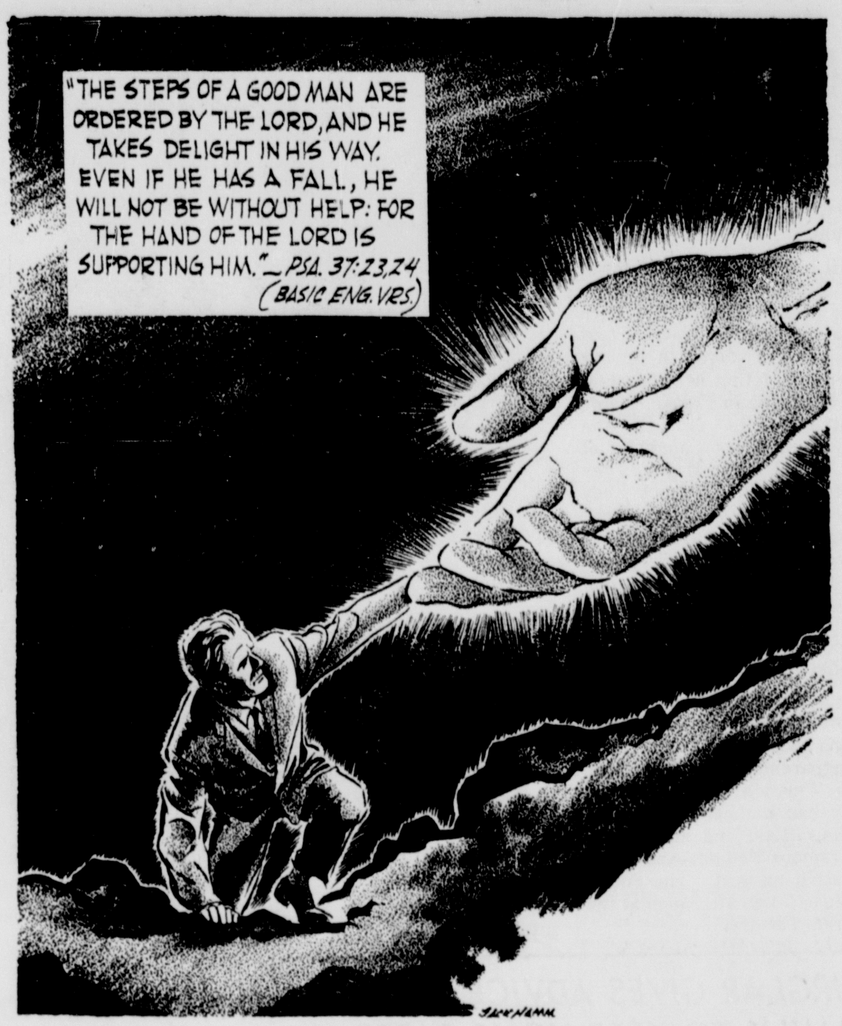

There seems to be no limit to the ways in which man can improve himself, his surroundings and the world in which he lives.

God has put in your keeping all the talent you need to make a contribution to the well-being of everyone. Be alert to discover ways that will enrich the lives of others as well as your own and you will add new meaning and zest to your own existence.

"I came that they may have life, and have it more abundantly." (John 10:10)

Inspire me, O Holy Spirit, to show imagination and enterprise in tackling the problems of our times.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Marin Over Rated As Place To Live

Editor, Independent-Journal:

We too read your article of Jan. 8, plus Mrs. Dyosky's reply.

As you put it we are also unappreciative immigrants to your Marin County.

The only reason we are continuing our subscription to your newspaper is that our house is up for sale. This is the most over-rated living place in the world, weather impossible, people ignorant that want their privacy and expensive to live for what, fog, dampness that gives one sinus trouble.

We immigrants are happily waiting to migrate back east, where people are human beings and the weather, with its occasional snow storms is bearable.

Bet you don't have the nerve to print this.

Incidentally, this immigrant's ancestors migrated to this country in the 1600's—when did yours come here?

Marin Better Place Because Of Hospital

Editor, Independent-Journal:

As the newly elected president of the board of directors of the Marin Hospital District, I wish to take this opportunity to express my pride and gratitude for being given this trust and I promise that I shall put forth my very best efforts to justify this confidence placed in me.

At the same time, I would like to suggest that the Independent-Journal consider presenting some well-earned bouquets in its weekly Saturday editorial page.

There are many individuals who have worked long and hard to make Marin General Hospital the outstanding institution it is today. Marin General has managed through the years since it was constructed to give service and treatment to the community unexcelled by others both in quality and cost. At the same time it has continued to provide those diversified medical services to the citizens of Marin County that private enterprise has been unable to offer due to their costly and unfrofitable nature.

I believe the bouquets I mentioned should go to the following persons who have served without pay—or even fringe benefits — for many years while devoting their best efforts in spite of distractions, obstacles and occasional criticism:

To Mrs. Marion Ibach, who has served on the Hospital Board since its inception more than 16 years ago and has given tremendous impetus to the quality of the hospital services.

To Herman Hale who has earned the honor for his 15 years of generous and intelligent guidance in all phases of the hospital operation, but especially in personnel matters;

To Charles Rowe, who deserves many plaudits for his five years of keen and strong guidance in helping to solve the varied problems which developed in our expansion and building program, and

To Lou Purkey who has given unstintingly of his time, both as an ex-officio consultant for several years and now as a Director, in the field of organization and personnel.

In addition, with a great deal of humility, I wish to extend my personal bouquets to a host of individuals who have helped make Marin General Hospital the great medical institution it is.

The administrative and employed staff all deserve full credit for their diligence and loyalty. The wonderful medical and nursing staffs have been outstanding in their devotion and untiring efforts. The generous and cheerful donation of thousands of hours by the marvelous Marin General Hospital Volunteers deserve unlimited thanks.

Harold Riede, the attorney for the board, also merits high praise for his many years of excellent, careful counsel.

In considering the day-by-day problems which are common to a hospital such as Marin General, we are prone to discount, or ignore completely the fact that it is a major asset to our community and that Marin County is a better place to live because of Marin General Hospital.

Time We Quit Being Uncle Santa Claus

Editor, Independent-Journal:

A loud and resounding "bravo" for Mr. Woodward of Larkspur for his fine letter on the U. N.!

And while on the U. N. and what we are (not) getting for the money we put out on its behalf are fresh on the mind of your readers, let us consider another very sore point.

As most everybody knows, Russia and some of her cohorts are refusing to pay their rightful share of the operating expenses of the organization; still, they are accorded the privilege of speaking, (or maybe "raving" would be the better word), and of voting, even the exercising of the veto privilege.

If you, or I, or John Doe belong to a Lodge Assn., or Union, we must pay dues. If we do not, we usually may not enter the meeting, or if we are allowed inside the meeting hall, we have no voice or vote.

Now why do the nations of the western bloc tolerate the actions of this group which is doing its best to tear down peace and proper understanding between peoples of the world simply because "they don't like the way we part our hair or some other equally thin and foolish excuse.

They talk of peaceful coexistence, all the while rattling rockets and accusing us of doing the rocket-rattling.

Let our U. N. ambassador be instructed to introduce a proposal to bar from voice or vote, the representatives of any nation that doesn't put up its rightful dues, and pay its share of the expenses. It is time we quit being a "paper tiger," as the Peking Group terms us! Also time we quit being Uncle Santa Claus!

De Gaulle's Recognition Weakening This Country's Stand On Red China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Red Chinese are either backing down on their resistance to a "two-China" policy or they are going to try to use American allies and friends, and even neutrals, to put this country in a box.

The problem of Red China promises to make 1964 a mixed up, goofy, and turbulent year. It started Monday when France recognized the Red Chinese, meaning it recognized them as the legitimate rulers of all mainland China.

France did this against the expressed wishes of its American ally which backs Chiang Kai-shek who claims his Nationalist government on Formosa is the only legitimate government both of Formosa and the mainland.

From a realistic standpoint this is a fiction and has been for years. The United States got thrown into it and then got stuck with it.

THE REDS defeated Chiang and his armies and drove him from the mainland to Formosa 100 miles offshore in 1949 after this country had given up helping him because his government was corrupt and useless.

He has been on Formosa ever since and could never get back to the mainland without American help, which isn't being given him, although this country is pledged to defend him from a Red Chinese invasion.

The Reds not only control the mainland, with its 700 million people, but show absolutely no sign of losing control. There are 11 million people on Formosa.

When Chiang first fled to Formosa, the United States washed its hands of him, said it wouldn't defend him from Red Chinese attack. It made him an ally, and agreed to defend him, only after the Korean war began.

NOW COMES the odd part, the only point on which Chiang and the Reds agree. Both insist Formosa and the mainland are not two separate Chinas but just two parts of one China.

Both claim to be the legitimate rulers of the one big China. Everything gets murky after that.

The Reds until now have insisted they wanted no recognition of their right to boss the mainland from any country recognizing the sovereignty of Chiang's government over Formosa.

Chiang has insisted on the same thing, but the other way around. To do otherwise, both argue, would be to admit there are two Chinas instead of one.

Forty-eight countries now recognize the Red Chinese, including some of this country's North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies: Britain, Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands. Now suddenly there appears to be a switch.

RED CHINA is accepting recognition from France which also recognizes Chiang's government. It may be they hope outraged Chiang will disown the French recognition, although this country insists he must not.

If such a hope is not the real basis for the Reds' acceptance of the dual French recognition, then the Communists seem to be abandoning their long-stated policy against the "two-China" recognition.

What could they hope to gain? If other countries flock behind France, particularly American allies, in recognizing Red China it should weaken this country's anti-Communist China position and cause trouble with friends.

THE ALLEN-SCOTT REPORT

Johnson To Retain $1,000-A-Plate Club

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — President Lyndon B. Johnson is giving the green light to continuing that lucrative fund-raising innovation of his late predecessor — the $1,000-a plate Presidential Club.

Johnson not only wants it kept on, but has set May 23 for the first get-together under his auspices.

The occasion is to consist of a dinner at $1,000-a-plate to be attended by the president, followed by a $100-a ticket gala. In effect, this plan is a duplicate of the contemplated Jan. 19 celebration of the third anniversary of President John F. Kennedy's inauguration. That was washed out by his untimely death.

SOME OF JOHNSON'S advisers wanted to drop the $1,000-a-plate Presidential Club. They urged confining the event to the old-style $100-a-plate dinner followed by a series of speeches. The president overruled them.

He has also laid down the rule that between now and the Democratic convention in Atlantic City in August, he will limit his fund-raising speeches to one a month.

Democratic national committeemen are being told two reasons are behind this restriction: The president's desire to concentrate his time and efforts on producing an "outstanding record" in Congress, and to conserve his energy and health as strongly urged by his doctor.

The president attended one fund-raising dinner early this month but made no speech.

He dropped in for a half-hour stay at a rally for Sen. Eugene McCarthy, (D-Minn.), who is up for election this year. Some of his partisans are promoting him for vice president. More than 500 attended the $100-a-plate dinner, including all but three members of the Cabinet — Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Att. Gen. Robert Kennedy.

But prominently present was Sen. Harry Byrd, (D-Va.), chairman of the finance committee that is writing the 11 billion-dollar tax-cutting bill. McCarthy is a liberal member of the committee.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON is looking for a new press secretary. Close friends are being asked for possible suggestions to replace Kennedy hold-over Pierre Salinger. The president has given no indication when this next White House change may take place, but is making it clear it is definitely contemplated. The president is indicating he is seeking a press secretary of the stature and character of the late Steve Early who filled this role for President Franklin D. Roosevelt . . . Also slated for departure is Assistant Defense Secretary Arthur ("news management") Sylvester, friend of Salinger, who was instrumental in his getting this Pentagon job. He won't be missed . . . Another Kennedy hold-over on the White House staff is planning a book on the late president. McGeorge Bundy, special assistant on foreign affairs and former Harvard dean, is telling friends he is compiling material for a book on Kennedy.

Reds Cutting Away At Africa

By TOM OCHILTREE

LONDON (AP)—Communist agents are using honeyed words and lessons in killing in their efforts to dominate the newly independent nations of Africa.

They hope thereby to end the continent's trade with the West and transform the African people into dedicated Marxists prepared to struggle for a completely Communist world.

When Premier Nikita Khrushchev said, "Africa is no exception to the inevitable spread of communism throughout the world," he defined the goal even though the Russian and Chinese Communists go about their tasks in different ways and in competition with each other.

These Communist efforts at subversion cause endless hours of worry to the leaders of the West. Yet thus far the Reds have been surprisingly unsuccessful.

They stubbed their toes in Guinea and the Congo when everything seemed to be in their favor. Elsewhere they have discovered that African leaders often have anticipated their moves.

A survey prepared by the Associated Press shows that the danger of Red takeovers still exists in many places, with Zanzibar a particularly vivid example.

But there also is hope that, given time, these Communist maneuvers can be frustrated even in a place as explosive as Zanzibar.

Africa's age of political innocence is over. Its death can be attributed in part to the growing rivalry between the Soviet Union and Communist China.

Experts believe most African leaders seek at all costs to avoid getting involved in the Moscow-Peking argument. These leaders see only danger for themselves in being drawn into the world struggle inside the Communist movement — a struggle which now reaches through Asia and into Latin America.

Diplomats who know Africa suspect that Communist China's influence is rising on the continent while Russia's is on the ebb. One man explains it this way:

"The Red Chinese are working with the wildest, most violent, most irresponsible groups. The Russian efforts are more subtle. The Russans put more emphasis on loans of money and technicians and the educating of Africans in Communist bloc universities.

African leaders, including President Sekou Toure of Guinea and Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana, are keeping up some connections with the West. There is an African saying to explain this attitude: "If you have an eastern friend you need a western one for insurance."

Many new African countries are following a trend toward one-party government with the party usually described as Socialist. But such parties represent a brand of African socialism distinct from what the Communists describe as "Marxist-Leninist scientific socialism."

For one thing African Socialists are careful not to pledge obedience to Moscow or Peking. They also claim they can mix socialism and capitalism.

In some cases such African parties seem to have almost no defined ideology. They are mere instruments for running a government and keeping the opposition quiet.

In seeking to swing Africans over to communism the agents of the Soviet Union and Communist China use everything from propaganda movies to bribes. They mix friendly arguments with threats.

But these techniques often fail. Even the Russian aid programs seem to have lost Moscow more friends than they have made. Many Africans complain about the shoddy quality of Communist goods. The Ghanaians also found that cocoa shipped from Ghana was used by the Russians to undercut world cocoa prices.

Difficulties also have attended the Soviet education program, although some 4,000 Africans now are enrolled at Russian universities. The Kremlin hopes these students will form a second wave of dedicated Marxists who will replace Africa's present bourgeois rulers in time.

But many African students come home disillusioned with communism. There was the exodus of African students from Bulgaria in February, 1963. Africans in other Communist bloc countries exhibited signs of unrest. The strange death of a Ghanaian student touched off a wild demonstration by Africans in Moscow last December.

Western experts regard the Chinese Communist subversion techniques as even more sinister than the ones employed by the Soviet Union.

The Chinese Reds would be hard pressed to compete with the Russians in building such things as roads and dams for African countries. Comparatively their penetration programs operate on a financial shoestring.

After seeking out dissident groups, the Chinese Communists train such people in the techniques of guerrilla warfare and revolution and urge them to strike. Tribesmen with old grudges to settle tend to fall for this line of talk easier than the more sophisticated African town dwellers.

Diplomatic sources said the recent successful uprising in Zanzibar showed signs of this Chinese Red technique. The foreign minister of the revotionary regime, Sheik Abdul Rahman Mohammed, known as Babu, reportedly has Chinese Communist contacts.

Several experts believe that in Zanzibar the Chinese Reds may have operated in an indirect manner. According to some accounts the uprising was helped along by Cubans trained by Chinese Reds rather than by the Chinese themselves.

The disorders in nearby Tanganyika are more difficult to pin down. There may have been some Communist plotting, diplomatic sources say, but the basic cause of unrest probably stems from strains produced by the development of Tanganyika from a tribal to a modern society plus racial antagonisms.

Fixing the causes of trouble in Africa is always difficult. Experts say the situation can change from month to month and, when the mobs are in the streets, from hour to hour.

With these qualifications in mind many African countries can be grouped in one of four listings.

The first includes Guinea and the Congo. Both were subjected to massive Communist pressure but successfully resisted subservice efforts. In Guinea the turning point came in December, 1961, when Soviet Ambassador Daniil Solod was expelled. All Communists, natives and foreign-born alike, have walked more carefully there since.

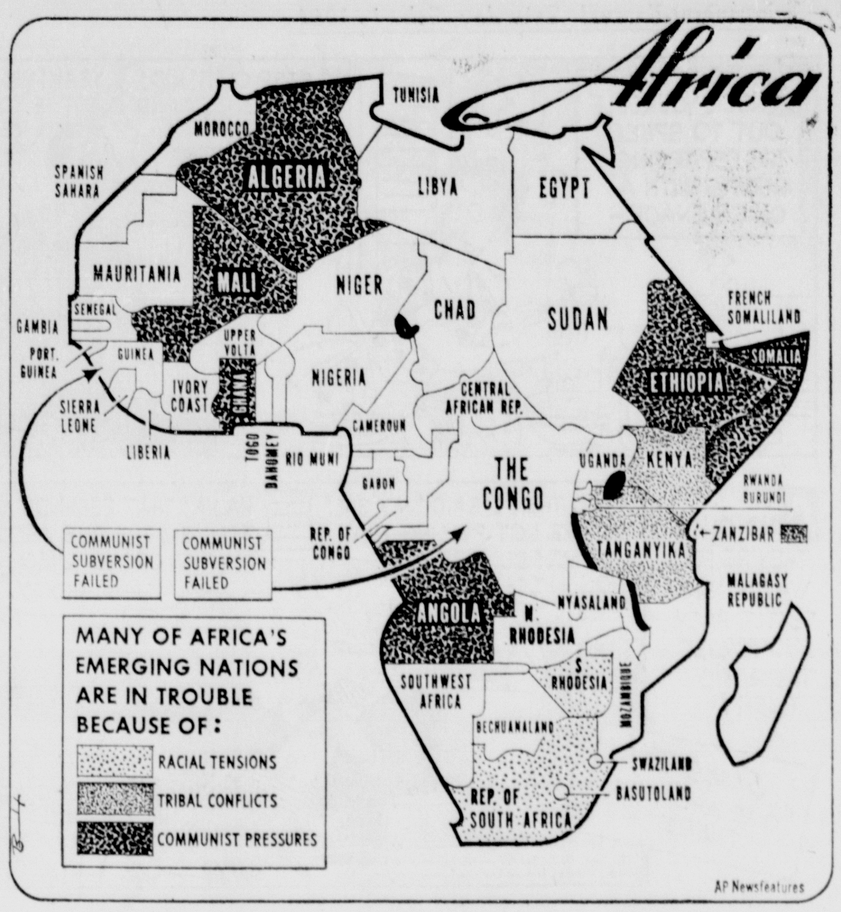

The Congo experienced Soviet interference in 1960 and 1963. The Russians seem to keep overplaying their hand in the Congo.

A second group is made up of countries now subjected to increasing Communist pressure. These are Algeria, Mali, Ghana, Angola, Zanzibar, Somalia, and Ethiopia. The Communists have spent a lot of money in both Somalia and Ethiopia. The latter country has received 110 million dollars in aid since 1954.

A third group is composed of Tanganyika and Kenya. Instability in these countries is traced more to old tribal conflicts and the breakdown of the tribal system than to clear-cut idiological issues.

And finally there is South Africa and Southern Rhodesia. In both countries a white versus African racial issue is involved.

Other African countries not included in any listing are regarded by experts as relatively quiet for the moment. But almost all of them are vulnerable in some degree to communist penetration.

AFFAIRS OF STATE

Brown Pushes For Bond Financing

By HENRY MacARTHUR

SACRAMENTO (CNS)—Here we go again. There's another big push by Gov. Edmund G. Brown for "deferred" state government financing.

The governor is proposing 760 million dollars worth of new bonds to help finance what will be his 3.5-billion-dollar budget this year. The exact figure is to be announced when the legislature convenes Monday.

Broken down, this amounts to 350 million dollars for state construction, 260 million dollars for school construction loans, and 150 million dollars for state parks.

The voters turned down a state park bond issue in 1962.

However, the legislature already has approved the new park bond issue, and it definitely will be on the ballot this year. The other two issues will be presented to the legislature in special session.

When and if the legislature adopts the proposed new Brown bond issue, here in a capsule is what the people of California are up against:

Bond issues outstanding at the present time, $2,832,000,000.

Bond issues authorized but not sold, $2,448,000,000.

Proposed bond issues, 760 million dollars.

Grand total of potential bonded debt in California, $6,040,000,000.

The grand total does not include the interest California taxpayers will have to contrbute to amortize the bond issues.

What does the interest mean to the California taxpayer?

Assuming that the total outstanding debt reaches 6 billion dollars, the interest will amount to approximately 4.8 billion dollars.

The state would be responsible for 10.8 billion dollars in order to finance the prospective total debt.

Some of the bond issues are what is known as self-amortizing, which means that only certain classes of people benefitting from the issues will repay the money, plus interest. However, the bonds will be general obligation bonds and the final responsibility will rest with all the taxpayers.

During 1964 alone, the state will pay off $108,334,000 in state bonds. In retiring these bonds, there will be $85,737,009 in interest charges on all outstanding bonds. This brings the 1964 total for bond repayment to better than 194 million dollars.

Principle payments will increase and interest payments decrease as the years pass, but only if the outstanding bonded indebtedness is left at its present level.

The figure is unrealistic in that eventuality, the total outstanding debt from the presently authorized bond issues will amount to 5.28 billion dollars without the proposed additions.

State Treasurer Bert Betts' 1963 bond brochure doesn't mention authorized bonds—only outstanding bonds. But virtually all bonds authorized will be sold eventually.

Thus, it can be seen that bond financing as practiced by the Brown administration is bringing the California public debt to a staggering total.

SOUTH AFRICA SCENE—English-speaking whites are moving to South Africa, bringing new and conflicting ideas to the land of the Afrikanders. They are said to share present racist policies and might look with disfavor on such scenes as this. Whites Worry White In South Africa

By NEIL J. SMITH

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — By the thousands, Europeans are coming to South Africa and are met by fear from their fellow whites of the changes they will bring with them.

The white men who have been here for generations number two million. Their forefathers settled from The Netherlands, Belgium and Germany more than 150 years ago. They are the "native" white South Africans and they are called Afrikaners.

Many of them see the fabric of the white South African culture disappearing if the "new" white immigrants continue to arrive in large numbers. The more conservative Afrikaners stand in firm opposition to the country's immigration boom.

They want to preserve the "South African way of life," which ordains the total separation of the races, a form of segregation at its severest.

The English-speaking white South Africans now number 1.2 million.

Officials said at least 33,000 "new South Africans—English speaking whites—settled in the country in 1963, the highest one-year immigration total since the all-time record of 35,600 in 1948.

The immigrants are attracted by the prospects of employment and business growth.

More than 40,000 new white immigrants are expected this year. This trend would push the white population of South Africa up to nearly four million by 1970 if it continues.

The influx would affect the traditional balance between the white Afrikaner majority and the white non-Afrikaner minority.

Though there is no evidence in official circles of a possible cut back on immigration, disquiet is reflected by anxious letters and statements appearing in the Afrikaans press.

The Afrikaner dilemma is based on two incompatible needs. One is the need for a constantly increasing white population, if it is to keep pace with the non-white birth rate. Whites form a racial minority of 20 per cent in the overwhelmingly black country.

On the other hand, the Afrikaner's way of life—his exclusive culture held together by church and language, passionate political ideals and historical tradition—is endangered by the influx of English-speaking white non-Afrikaners who share none of his heritage.

New immigrants, rather than attempt to assimilate the Afrikaner culture, find it easier to link up with the easy-going, more cosmopolitan outlook of the non-Afrikaners.

And perhaps within a generation, if the present influx continues, there will be more English than Afrikaans-speaking white South Africans. The balance of power would be held by people born outside the country.

Afrikaners, fearing that the Afrikaans language and way of life would be swamped by a flood of English-speaking immigrants, suggested that more new South Afrikans be recruited from the original European homelands of the Afrikaners.

But today's Hollander, Belgian or German usually finds he has more in common with the English-speaking South African than the Afrikaner.

Still, one South African organization — "Dietse Federasi"—has urged the govment to revise its immigration policy in favor of Dutch and Flemish immigrants.

The organization may have touched on the crux of South Africa's immigration problem when it charged the government should worry less about "diplomas and certificates" and concentrate on attracting immigrants whose attitudes and concepts of morality would make the assimilable within the Afrikaner culture.

Bloodless Coup Surprise To U.S.

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

One military regime replaced another in embattled South Vietnam. Maj. Gen. Nguyen Khanh took over in a swift, bloodless coup merely by arresting the military leaders who had toppled the Ngo Dinh Diem government only three months ago.

The Khanh take-over apparently came as a total surprise in Washington. The official word was one of surprise over the coup, and officials in the capital pleaded for days they had insufficient information from Saigon for a speedy appraisal of the new government.

But the new Saigon "government" was assured of continuing U.S. aid and greater supplies of materials in the South Vietnamese war against the Viet Cong.

Khanh

Khanh replaced Maj. Gen. Duong Van Minh as chief of state. Khanh said later he had tried to convince Minh to stay on but that Minh had refused. Although Khanh insisted that Minh was not under arrest, the deposed general's house remained ringed by tanks and troops.

At the same time Khanh promised a fair trial for the ousted members of the military junta who played a major role in the ouster and slaying of the brothers Ngo (Diem and Nhu).

When Khanh stepped into the number one spot he said he had acted in face of an alleged French-inspired plot that was steering South Vietnam toward neutrality in its nine-year-old war against the Communist-ruled North Vietnamese.

By its swift "no-lives-lost, no-shots-fired" coup and the promised continuity of U.S. aid, the question of compromise with the Communists or neutrality in the key Southeast Asian country was ruled out. The developments indicated the United States was in the fight until the ultimate decision.

Around the World Around The Clock

Paris—French President Charles de Gaulle struck at the heart of the United States' policy in Asia this week, first by recognizing the Communist Chinese government and then declaring that the former French-controlled Indochinese Peninsula—Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam—should be neutralized in cooperation with the Peking government.

Cape Kennedy—A United States' spacecraft raced toward an intended collision with the moon guided by radio impulses. The eight-foot high, 825-pound Ranger 6, carrying six television cameras, promised to give the world its first face-to-face glimpse of the lunar surface.

Berlin—An unarmed U.S. Air Force jet was shot down by Russian jet fighters when the plane apparently strayed off course and flew over East Germany. Three Americans were killed. Washington accused the Russians of commiting an "inexcusable brutal act."

Washington—Panama formally charged the United States with aggression and demanded an investigation of the Canal Zone rioting by the Organization of American States.

London—A joint United States-British proposal called for the placing of about 10,000 troops—an international force—on Cyprus to keep hostile Greek and Turkish factions from renewing the nationalistic war on the island which threatens to provoke a struggle between Greece and Turkey.

Today is Saturday, Feb. 1, the 32nd day of 1964 with 334 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter. The evening stars are venus and Jupiter.

Those born today include Victor Herbert, the American orchestrial conductor and composer, in 1859.

On this day in history:

In 1790, the U.S. Supreme Court held its first session, meeting in the Royal Exchange Building of New York City.

In 1893, Thomas Edison finished the first moving-picture studio in the world. It was built in West Orange, N. J., at a cost of $637.

In 1951, the United Nations General Assembly condemned Communist China as an aggressor in Korea.

In 1956, Autherine Lucy, a 26-year-old Negro student, was admitted to the University of Alabama on orders issued by a federal court. She was the first Negro to be admitted to the Alabama school.

A thought for the day—Author and poet Rudyard Kipling said: "A woman's guess is much more accurate than a man's certainty."

You Might Try More Cue Bids And Put A Little Fun In Game

CASTRO

Alfred Sheinwold, who writes in this space Monday through Friday, is a bridge expert. In his books and in his columns you read very little about cue bids but cue bids are a very controversial subject and every expert has his own theories.

I repeat I am no expert, however this Saturday column is for Marin players and I will write about anything the natives want. I have been asked many times for a discussion on cue bids and I have hedged long enough, so here are my own views on cue bidding and, to steal a phrase from TV, "You Asked For It."

In standard American bidding the opening two bid is the strongest bid that can be made and is forcing to game or a penalty double. After the opponents have opened the bidding the cue bid is the strongest bid and is also forcing to game or a penalty double.

HERE IS MY rule of thumb for any cue bid I make: The cue bid is the strongest bid I can make (and now changing slightly) with respect to my previous bids.

A few examples: I am South in all cases:

1.	North	East	South
	P	1C	2C?
2.	South	West	North	East
	1H	1S	P	P
	2S?
3.	East	South	West	North
	1H	P	P	1S
	P	2H?
4.	South	West	North	East
	P	1C	1S	P
	2C?
5.	West	North	East	South
	1H	Double	1NT	P
	P	Double	P	2H?

Answers:

1. 2C by South is a game force and if the East player were George Gustafson of Mill Valley or another player I know, who resides in Corte Madera, I may be trying to expose an opening psyche!

2. 2S by South says, partner I did not open with a two bid but my hand is just short of it, probably 19 to 22 points. A one round force.

3. 2H by South in this case would mean, partner, I would have opened the bidding with one heart but when East did I had no proper bid except to make a trap pass. I have between 14 to 16 points and if you had reopened with a double we would have had to order a Loomis Truck to take our money to the bank. A one round force.

4. 2C by South, after hearing your one spade overcall my hand re-evaluates to an opening bid and I am inferring excellent spade support. One round force.

5. 2H by South, I heard your two loud takeout doubles, I realize you have an excellent hand but I am too broke to double or bid over the 1NT by East, and now I am bidding my only five card suit. P.S., I don't even have three spades or else I would venture a two spade bid for you.

PLEASE NOTE these are all low level cue bids and are not necessarily showing first round control of the cue bid suit. At the three level my cue bids are either showing honor cards or asking if my partner has honor cards in this suit and we are trying to reach a three no trump contract. At the four level or five level I am showing first round control of the cue bid suit.

If you have never been left in a cue bid you are not using these wonderful bids often enough so put a little fun in your bridge game, do more cue bidding.

Huge Church Icon Project Awarded To Marin Artist

Marin artist Vasileos Kapousouz, 52, is taking on the biggest project of his career, something he has wanted to do all his life.

Kapousouz, a sculptor, art teacher and commercial artist, last month became the official iconographer for the new Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox Church in San Francisco which was dedicated last Sunday.

He won the job in competition with 25 other top artists. He will be working at the project four years.

"It's something I've always wanted to do," Kapousouz said as he looked at a model of part of the huge church. The model is set up in the studio of his home at 3 Elm Avenue, Larkspur.

"Byzantine art has almost died out. It was, I believe, the greatest of all artistic achievements. Through a style that goes beyond realism, the artist expressed more than nature."

Kapousouz, a native of the Greek island of Lesbos near the coast of Asia Minor, came to the United States with his parents when he was 13. He studied art in Boston. He later studied in Belgium and then in New York. It was in New York that he started his career as a commercial artist.

He said commercial work involves little creativity and there is nothing lasting about it. However, it does pay well and with it and with teaching, Kapousouz supported himself, his wife and four children.

In 1956, Kapousouz sold his home on Long Island and moved with his family to Rome, hoping to study and find a better climate for fine art. Another reason for the move was a desire for better weather.

After living in the United States, his family, especially the children, found living in Europe difficult.

After hearing a friend extol the climate of California, the artist and his family moved to Santa Barbara. This was in 1957. Kapousouz got a job teaching.

In about a year, however, Del Monte, Hunts and Libby's, the food companies, learned that Kapousouz was on the West Coast. He began getting commercial orders. Soon it was necessary to move to the Bay Area to be closer to his work.

A year ago, the artist learned that there was a competition for the new Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox Church. He had two weeks to submit his entry for judging. He chose an icon of Christ.

Other competitors included artists from Europe, men who had studied Byzantine art all their lives and were experts at it.

After 11 months of judging, Kapousouz learned that he had won the job. He considers the project a turning point in his career and he hopes he can do a job that will have some influence in improving the status of future artists.

"There is little hope for fine art in the United States today," he said. "To make a living, one must either be a commercial artist or go into teaching. This is because art performs no useful function in this country today."

In many European countries, it is required that 10 per cent of a building's cost be spent in sculpture and other adornments, he explained. That is not the case here, and modern buildings are nothing but huge expanses of glass and concrete, he said.

The only exception in the United States' attitude toward art is in the churches. There art finds a use. It is particularly true in orthodox churches.

In a Greek Orthodox church, Kapousouz said, the icons are more important than the priest and more important than the structure. This tradition is due to the fact that the icons at one time were the only means of spiritual communication with the ignorant.

The church will have 40 panels, screens and walls for icons. Largest area will be the concave apse that rises 52 feet above the altar. This will be done in mosaics. Another large mosaic will be the Pantocrator in the dome of the church. This will be Christ in an area 26 feet in diameter.

Kapousouz hopes to do as much as possible in mosaics, but the cost may limit some of the work to oils.

One difficulty of the job is the request that the work follow the Byzantine style and at the same time have a contemporary feeling. The artist does not want to take too many liberties with tradition.

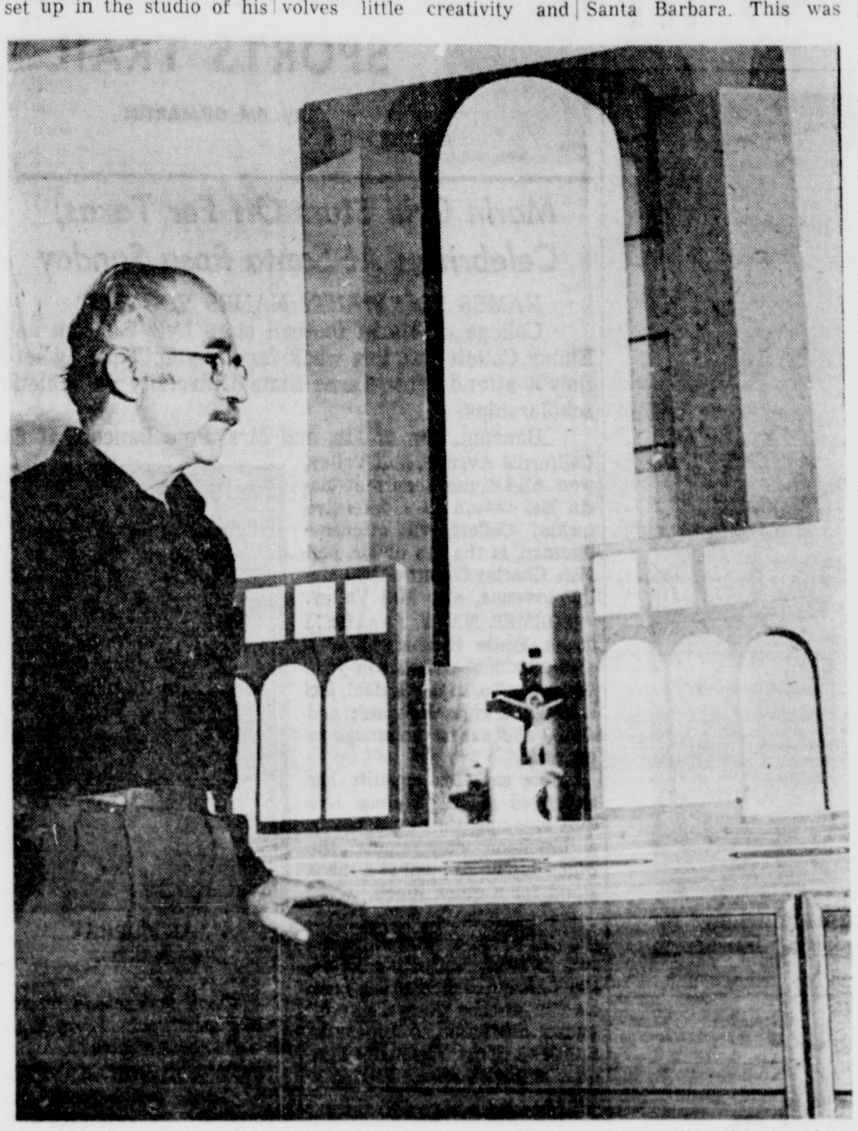

He said liberties have been taken in the design of the building and adaptations will have to be made. The building has stained glass windows, something that would not be found in a traditional Greek church where darkness and mystery is emphasized, he said.

The apse, traditionally has the Madonna and Child, but the apse at Holy Trinity is too tall and narrow for such a static portrayal. It will have, instead, the resurrection.

Kapousouz, who does his commercial work under the name of Bill Kapra, has a studio in San Francisco. He has not decided yet if he will use that or the studio at home for his work on the church.

He has decided, however, that he will be doing no commercial work in the next four years.

"I want to devote all my time to this," he said.

ALTAR MODEL—Marin artist Vasileos Kapousouz looks at the blank spaces in the screens and the huge apse that he must fill with inspirational designs. Screen area is 50 feet across and apse is 52 feet high.

He's Churchgoing President, But Which Church?

By ALVIN SPARKS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Lyndon B. Johnson is a regular churchgoer but without a fixed spiritual abode.

The chief executive has joined congregations of four denominations at Christian worship on the last five Sundays.

Johnson, born of Baptist parents, has been a member of the Disciples of Christ Church for more than 40 years. Usually, however, he attends Episcopal services because his wife and daughters observe that faith.

But over recent weeks, the president has gone to Lutheran, Episcopal, Methodist and Catholic churches for Sunday worship.

The Lutheran church was in Fredericksburg, Tex., and Johnson went there Dec. 29 with visiting German Chancellor Ludwig Erhard because of the latter's religious affiliation.

The Catholic service was the annual Red Mass last Sunday at St. Matthew's Cathedral in Washington. At this Mass, prayers are offered for divine guidance of the judiciary, legal profession, and public officials connected with law enforcement.

The Sunday after going to the Lutheran church in Fredericksburg, Johnson and his wife returned to that town—about 15 miles from their Texas ranch—and went to the St. Bernabas Church, a small Episcopal mission.

Johnson was back at an Episcopal church the following Sunday, Jan. 11, in the village of Catoctin Furnace, Md. This is down the mountain from the president's Camp David retreat.

The pastor of that house of worship, the Harriott Chapel, was given about 10 minutes notice that Johnson was coming to his 11 a.m. service.

A week later, at the Thurmont Methodist Church, also near Camp David, a circuit-riding preacher was informed as he arrived for his 10 a.m. service that the president was inside the church.

During these five weeks that he joined four Christian flocks at worship, Johnson also sat with a Jewish congregation at a dinner in Austin, Tex., dedicating their new synagogue.

As vice president and as a senator, Johnson also attended various churches in Washington, including the National City Christian Church of his own denomination, and the Washington Cathedral and St. Mark's Episcopal Church for his wife's affiliation.

Since becoming president, Johnson has gone a couple of times to St. Mark's, which is across the street from the Library of Congress. He also has worshipped at St. John's Episcopal Church, across Lafayette Square from the White House and known as "The Church of the Presidents."

On Thanksgiving, the Johnsons went to a Protestant-Jewish service at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church about a mile and a half from the White House.

And on three occasions since he became president almost 10 weeks ago, Johnson has gone to non-Protestant houses of worship for the funerals of friends.

The first, of course, was the funeral Mass for President John F. Kennedy at St. Matthew's Cathedral on Nov. 25. He went to another Catholic cathedral in Philadelphia on Dec. 24 for the funeral of Rep. William Green (D-Pa.).

And he went to a Jewish temple in New York City on Dec. 8 for the funeral of former governor-senator Herbert H. Lehman.

Tuesday, Johnson honored Lehman in death by presenting to his widow the Presidential Medal of Freedom the New York Democrat was to have received a day after he died. And Johnson brought his non-denominational religious convictions to the fore by recalling, in connection with his 1955 heart attack:

"Senator Lehman was a most unusual man and a most thoughtful person. When I was hovering between life and death, he made it possible for me to be here today. He got up in the Senate one morning . . . and offered a Senate resolution that the Senate pray for my recovery. And it was just at the time when I needed every prayer I could get. And his prayer was answered."

Unity Move Comes To Old U.S. Town

NEW YORK (AP)—An Episcopal minister, a Roman Catholic priest and a Presbyterian clergyman jointly conducted the Thanksgiving Eve service in the village hall of Irvington, N. Y.

One asked the invocation. One preached the sermon. One said the benediction.

The service last November was the first interfaith Christian worship service ever in the village, a Hudson River community that was the scene of Revolutionary War activity, and the locale of Washington Irving's fiction.

The service exemplifies the growing popularity of the movement toward Christian unity within the United States and the world.

This ecumenical movement has involved prelates and evangelists, the clergy and the laity, dioceses and individual churches.

Rev. Billy Graham, a Southern Baptist making his first appearance at a Catholic institution, discussed the "ecumenical revolution" before an audience at Belmont Abbey College near Charlotte, N. C.

"This is the beginning of something so fantastic it could change all of Christendom and will affect you, your children and their children," the evangelist said.

So far, there has been little, if any, actual exchange of pulpits across the walls of Catholicism, Eastern Orthodoxy and Protestantism. But there has been an opening of dialogue on religious levels ranging from the churchgoer to Catholic cardinal.

Tuesday, by invitation, a Catholic theologian addressed a group of Protestant clergymen in Philadelphia. Today a Catholic clergyman-professor speaks to the Ohio Council of Churches in Columbus. It will be the first appearance by a Catholic churchman before this Protestant body in its 45-year history.

The movement's increased popularity flows from many founts—the unifying work of the National and World Council of Churches, the election of John F. Kennedy as the first U.S. president of Roman Catholic faith, the Vatican Council in Rome.

Novato Adventists Welcome New Pastor

Paul E. Alderson of 12 Statia Drive, Novato, has taken over as the new minister of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church in Novato.

He replaced John H. Toppenberg who left Marin in November to do evangelistic work in San Diego.

Alderson is a graduate of Walla Walla College, Wash. and has served 28 years as a minister in Oregon and Idaho. His wife, Margaret, has taught in elementary schools for 18 years.

Alderson will work with the congregation on its building program. A new church is planned on Novato Boulevard.

800 BIBLES

By PHIL THOMAS

CHELSEA, Mich. (AP) — The man who wacks his wife and wants to salve his conscience can do so by referring to the Bible—that is, the "wife-beating Bible."

It is this rare version printed in London in 1549, which contains a note to that effect in the text following Peter's instructions to wives to be chaste.

Says the note, in modern English translation:

"And if she be not obedient and helpful to him, endeavour to beat the fear of God into her head, that thereby she may be compelled to learn her duty and do it."

The Bible belongs to Ben R. Donaldson, 69, who has more than 800 Bibles in his collection. It is one of a number of Bibles in which notes were intentionally inserted by translators.

In his collection, Donaldson—a retired auto executive—has a number of bizarre or unique Bibles.

"I don't really recall how I got interested in Bible collecting," Donaldson says, "but I used to teach a Sunday school class about 35 years ago, and I suspect that somewhere about then I got interested in Bibles." He says his collection is believed to be the largest and most valuable private collection in the United States.

Donaldson says that in the early years of printing, the Roman Catholic Church was against translating the Bible from Latin to English. When the church realized it could not stop the trend it decided to issue its own English translation and in 1582 it issued the New Testament and in 1609-10 the Old Testament.

The first dated Bible appeared in 1462. Donaldson has a 1466. He has manuscript Bibles dating back to 1225; tiny Bibles that can be held in the palm of the hand; giant Bibles that are barely liftable; Bibles bound in silver and sprinkled with jewels, and Bibles bound in embroidered cloth.

One of Donaldson's manuscript Bibles, written in Latin by an apparently disgruntled monk, has at its end a penned in phrase, which loosely translated, reads: "The book finished, let us break the bones of the boss!"

CLERGY SHOULD DROP HABIT, GRAHAM SAYS

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Clergymen shouldn't smoke cigarettes, says the Rev. Dr. Billy Graham.

"The Bible does not say smoking cigarettes is a sin," said Graham. "But I think for a person to deliberately endanger his health is wrong."

Adventists Move Ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some big, round numbers were cited as landmarks just passed by the Seventh-Day Adventist Church. Its statistical department said that in its 100th anniversary year, the church for the first time took in more than 100,000 new members.

Unitarian Speaker

Dr. Lambertus Hekhuis of Corte Madera, a retired Presbyterian minister, will be guest minister at the Unitarian-Universalist Church at 11 a.m. tomorrow at the Tamalpais Center Women's Club in Kentfield.

Oregon Girl Gives U.S. First Olympic Medal

By TED SMITS

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP) — The United States won its first medal of the ninth Winter Olympics today—a third-place bronze for Jean Saubert of Lakeview, Ore., in the women's slalom ski race — but there were anxious moments while a jury deliberated on whether Miss Saubert had missed a gate on her second run.

Finally, the jury said there was no violation, decreeing the medal was Miss Saubert's.

The Russians, meanwhile, boosted their medal production to 12 as the sensational Lidia Skoblikova won her third speed skating title in as many days and Claudia Boyarskikh led a 1-2-3 Soviet sweep in the women's 10-kilometer ski race.

The rebounding U.S. hockey team, fresh off an 8-0 victory over Germany yesterday after losing to Russia in its opening match, faces Sweden's once-beaten team tonight.

Miss Saubert, 21-year-old Oregon State co-ed, had the third best time for two runs down the flag-dotted Lizum Valley course, finishing behind a pair of French sisters, Christine and Marielle Goitschel.

But gate guards reported the American girl had missed one of the 56 gates on the upper reaches of the course, and this threw a cloud over the Americans' jubilation.

Amos Little, U.S. delegate to the International Ski Federation, demanded a review of the films and, about an hour after the race, he emerged from a meeting of the jury with the report:

"Miss Saubert is definitely in. A review of the control film by the judges definitely proved she passed the gate in proper fashion."

Mrs. Skoblikova, a dimpled 24-year-old Siberian schoolteacher, won her third speed skating championship with a victory in the 1,000 meters. Another teacher, Claudia Boyarskikh, led a 1-2-3 Soviet sweep in the 10-kilometer ski race, giving the Russians a whopping total of 12 medals in all.

The Russians, dominating these Games as no country has in the past, have five gold medals, three silver and four bronze. Finland has four medals including the two gold, for the second best showing. The United States had been blanked until Miss Saubert's fine performance in the women's slalom.

A pair of darkhorse Britons, Tony Nash and Robin Dixon, broke the Italian monopoly in the two-man bobsled races on the icy Igls chute, with the U.S. crews finishing fifth and seventh.

Two pink-cheeked daughters of a French Alpine inn keeper, Christine Goitschel, 19, and Marielle, 18, made Olympic history by sweeping the first two places in the women's slalom —the first time sisters ever finished one-two.

Christine won with two flashing runs down Lizum Valley courses spinning in and out of the 50-odd gates, for a combined time of 1 minute, 29.86 seconds. Marielle followed with 1:30.77.

Miss Saubert's time was 1:31.36.

The other three U.S. entrants—Linda Meyers of Bishop, Calif., Barbara Ferries of Houghton, Mich., and Joan Hannah of Franconia, N.H.—finished out of the running.

Nash and Dixon won the two-man bobsled championship with a total time of 4 minutes, 21.90 seconds for four runs down the twisting, 1,640-yard chute at Igls.

Larry McKillip of Saranac Lake, N.Y., with James Lamy of Lake Placid, N.Y., as brakeman, grabbed fifth place with 4:24.60. The other U.S. sled, piloted by little Charley McDonald of Malone, N.Y., with Charles Pandolph of Saranac Lake at the brake, finished seventh in 4:25.00.

Janice Smith of Rochester, N.Y., who plowed into a snow bank at the end of the 500 meter race yesterday, turned in the best American performance in the women's 1,000-meter speed skating test.

She clocked 1:36.8 for seventh place. Barbara Lockhart of Chicago, subbing for the injured Marie Lawler of Minneapolis, did 1:38.6 for 10th, and Jeanne Ashworth of Lake Placid, N.Y., placed 11th in 1:38.7.

The best American time in the 1,000-meter speed skating was 1:36.8 by Janice Smith of Rochester, N.Y., Barbara Lockhart of Chicago, subbing for the injured Marie Lawler of Minneapolis, registered 1:38.6.

Jeanne Ashworth of Lake Placid, N.Y., clocked 1:38.7.

San Rafael Sweeps Sixth Straight Win

Independent-Journal Sports

Drake Beaten By Monti And Mates

San Rafael High School's rampaging cage team ran through the first half of the Marin Athletic League basketball race without a loss, racking up its sixth straight win last night, a 63-50 triumph over the Drake Pirates on the Bulldogs' court.

The Bulldogs of San Rafael once again were led by their sharp-shooting forward Rod Monti who plunked through 27 points, increasing his league-leading total to 141 points and a 23.5 average.

Monti couldn't miss, making 10 out of 11 shots from the floor, and hitting on 7 out of 10 free throws. He also led the San Rafael cagers in rebounds with 13. Quite a night!

San Rafael raced out to a 17-11 lead in the first quarter and stretched it to 33-23 at the half. Drake got within six points in the final quarter, but the Bulldogs quickly wrapped up the contest.

Drake took more shots than San Rafael, but San Rafael cashed in on more of them. Drake took 50 shots from the floor and hit on 19 of them, while the Bulldogs made 23 out of 41. From the free-throw line, San Rafael made 17 out of 29 and the Pirates made 12 out of 21.

BULLDOGS TALLER

The Bulldogs, a much taller outfit than the Pirates, outrebounded Drake 45-23. The San Rafael superiority on the boards was quite evident in the second half, when the Bulldogs snagged 25 to only 7 for Drake.

The Pirates were led in the scoring column by Bob Brackett with 17 points and Lorry Galassi with 13 points.

Individual scoring:

Drake	11	12	9	18—50
San Rafael	17	16	11	19—63

SPORTS IN SHORTS . . .

Bolin Signs; Seals Lose

Bob Bolin, again counted on as a relief workhorse and part-time starting pitcher, signed his 1964 contract, the San Francisco Giants said today.

He was 10-6 last year and had six saves. He struck out 134 men in 137 innings, including 14 in one game.

Hal Lanier, second baseman who hit .282 at Springfield of the Eastern League, and Dan Markowski, outfielder who batted in 94 runs at Fresno of the California League, also signed.

IT WOULD be hard to convince the San Francisco Seals today that the Vancouver Canucks are firmly entrenched in the Western Hockey League cellar.

The Canucks played like champions last night in trouncing the Seals 8-1 and temporarily killing any hopes the Seals had of grabbing a share of second place in the WHL standings. The second place Los Angeles blades also lost, so San Francisco remained two points back in third place. The Seals' lone goal was scored by Al Nicholson.

LUCIEN REEBERG, 21-year-old rookie tackle of the Detroit Lions, died suddenly yesterday of "cardiac failure brought on by uremic poisoning," shocking teammates and club officials who described the 6-foot-4, 290-pound youngster as a potentially great star in the National Football League.

THE LONGEST win string in high school basketball is at an end.

Fernley, Nev., downed Virginia City High School last night, 87-74, to end a 55-game Virginia City streak stretching back to 1961.

Redwood Wins; Tam Finishes Game With Four-Man Team

Redwood High School's cagers knocked off the Tamalpais Indians last night, 73-62, in a game which saw the Indians finish with only four players on the court.

It all came about when four players on the 10-man Tamalpais squad fouled out, one was tossed out and the other had to leave because of an ankle injury.

The first three to foul out of the game for Tam were Larry Gray, Rich Olsen and Chris Schuepbach. Tami Bell was tossed out of the game after a technical foul for elbowing. Star forward Ellis Williams sprained his ankle and couldn't play in the second half.

Then with 30 second left in the contest, Dan O'Brien fouled out, leaving just four eligible Tam players. During part of the game, the Indians were playing with four guards and a forward, with 5-10 guard Gray acting as center.

It was a rough and tumble game that saw Tam commit a total of 30 fouls to 16 for Redwood. Those fouls proved costly to Tam as Redwood cashed in on 33 points from the free throw line.

In the third quarter, Tam trailed the Giants of Redwood by 13 points, but in the final quarter pulled within two points of the winners before Redwood put the Marin Athletic League game on ice.

Redwood was led in the scoring column by Jim Halm with 21 points, and Dave Auerbach and Hillard Witt each with 18. Twelve of Auerbach's points came from the free throw line, and 11 of Halm's 21 points were from the charity line. Cedric Collett led the Tam pointmakers with 16.

Individual scoring:

Redwood	19	22	20	12—73
Tamalpais	16	21	14	11—62

Redwood scorers—Larry Herst, 2-0-4; Bob Piro, 4-0-8; Dave Auerbach, 3-12-18; Hillard Witt, 6-6-18; Paul Ackerman, 0-1-1; Jim Carroll, 0-1-1; Doug Detrick, 0-2-2; Jim Halm, 5-11-21. Total: 20-33—73.

Tamalpais scorers—Ellis Williams, 1-0-2; Cedric Collett, 5-6-16; Chris Schuepbach, 1-2-4; Tami Bell, 1-1-3; Rich Olsen, 3-4-10; Robin Prosch, 1-0-2; Don O'Brien, 2-1-5; Alan Polanshek, 4-2-10; Larry Gray, 5-0-10. Total: 23-16—62.

Sixth Straight Win For Novato 'B' Quint

Keeping its undefeated Marin Athletic League record intact, the Novato High School Class B basketball team won its sixth straight game last night, a 56-46 pasting of the Terra Linda Trojans on the Novato court.

In other Class B action, Redwood dumped Tamalpais 56-42 and San Rafael downed Drake 43-32.

In Novato's victory, Tom Corder topped the scoring for the Hornets with 18 points, followed by teammate Jeff Tuel with 12 points.

The triumph moved Novato two full games in front of Terra Linda and San Rafael, both with 4-2 league marks.

John McGee of Redwood and Greg Tellis of Tam tied for high scoring honors in their game as the youngsters tallied 20 points apiece.

In the San Rafael-Drake battle, the Bullpups were led by Paul Schmidt with 15 points and Bill Pandiani and Rich Bettini, both with 12. High scorer for Drake was Duke Iverson with 11 points.

Red Hot Novatans Win 4th Straight

Novato High's Hornet basketball team picked up its fourth straight Marin Athletic League victory last night, blasting the Terra Linda Trojans 64-50 in the final game of the first half of the round-robin competition.

With Novato's top scorer Nick Willard leading the way with 8 points, the Hornets grabbed a quick 21-7 first quarter lead and never gave it up. Novato led at halftime, 27-16.

Willard topped the scoring in the game with 16 points and teammate Barry Hachmyer ended up with 15 points. Terra Linda's Don Knotts led the Trojans with 15 points, followed by Bill Lee's 14-point production.

BALL HAWK

Novato's Fred Arnold led the rebounding in the game as the ball hawk brought down 18 rebounds. The game was played before a near-capacity crowd in the Hornets' gym.

Ken Beade scored all eight of his points for Novato in the third quarter, sinking four field goals.

In the free throw department, Novato made 12 out of 21 attempts and Terra Linda registered 12 points on 22 attempts. The victory for Novato moved its record to 4-2 in league play, while Terra Linda is 1-5.

JOHN BRODIE must be kidding when he tells banquet audiences that "There is nothing wrong with the 49er offensive line."

After sitting out last season with an injury, the 49er quarterback must have forgotten how he had to run for his life from bruising enemy linemen who poured through the sieve-like 49er front wall. Maybe John's trying to butter up his blockers for better protection next year.

And by saying the offensive line is okay, isn't he placing the blame on the failure of the 49er attack last season on reserve quarterbacks Bobby Waters and Lamar McHan?

NOVATO'S INDIAN Valley Golf Club membership increased by six recently with the initiation of George Barson, Ted Klemens, Phil Reese, George Homenko, Eric Baker and Phil Ogle.

YOUNG INSURANCE exec Allan B. Murray, a "man about Marin" type of sports fan, will lead a group of localites to the San Francisco Baseball Writers Spring awards dinner at the Jack Tar Hotel Feb. 10. Murray's most recent sports achievement was victory in a S.F. domino tourney last fall. But don't hold that against him.

DENNIS UNTERMANN of Fairfax, who won the San Francisco Wrist Wrestling championship several months ago, has entered the "World Wrist Wrestling Tournament" at Petaluma's Veterans Memorial auditorium.

Those interested in testing their arm strength in the tourney can enter by contacting columnist Bill Soberanes at the Petaluma Argus-Courier.

CHAIRMAN PAUL GOTTLIEB reports the March of Dimes benefit bowling tourney which ended Sunday at San Rafael's Country Club Bowl, netted $700 profit and Paul sends his thanks to the bowlers and merchants who made the tourney a success.

Six Bay Area Yachts In Race To Acapulco

There will be six Bay Area yachts among the 34 signed up when the seventh biennial San Diego to Acapulco race starts tomorrow at noon.

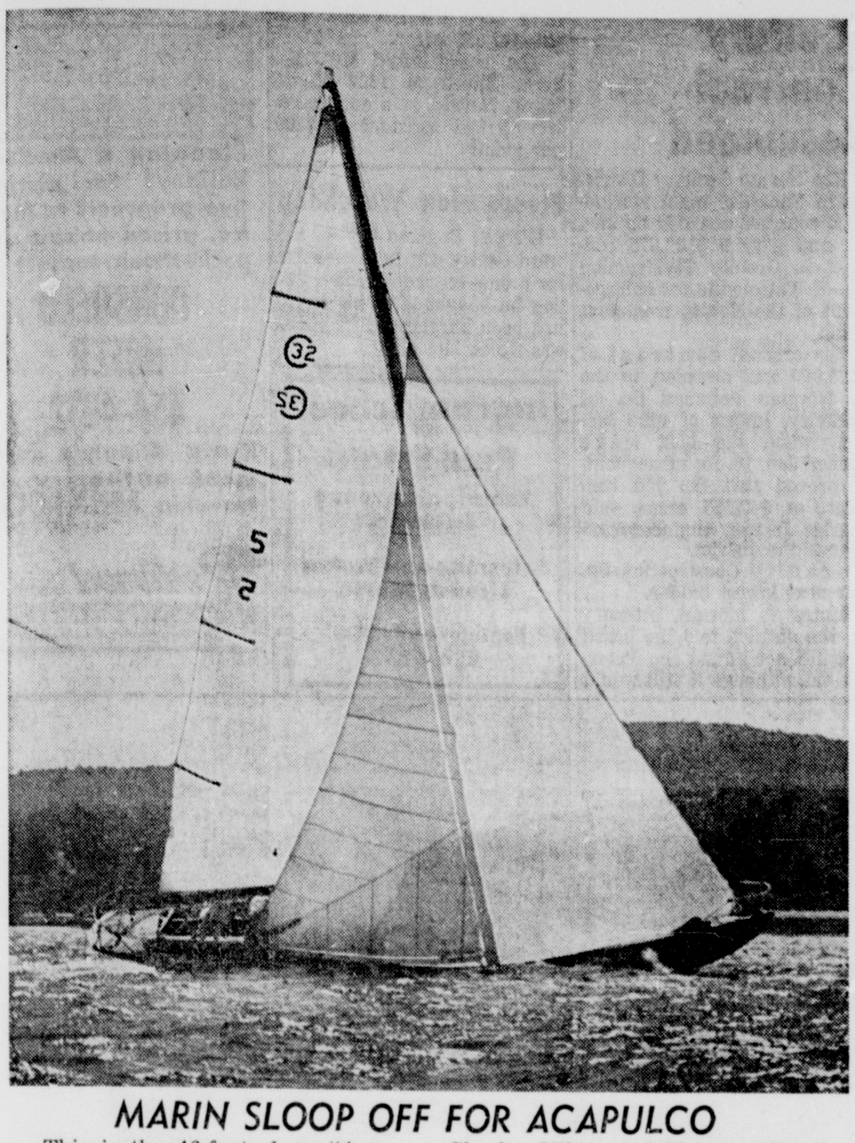

Bay Area boats include Henry Grandin's "Amorita," San Francisco Yacht Club; George Kiskaddon's "Spirit," St. Francis Y.C.; Ben Williams' "Capricious," San Francisco Y.C.; V. E. Couch's "Jezebel," St. Francis Y.C.; Joe DeMeter's "Hetaera," Richmond Y.C., and James Reisinger's "Moonfire," San Francisco Y.C.

Starting line for the 1,430-mile race will be off Point Loma and the finish in the Boca Chica area of the Mexican seaport. The event is co-sponsored by the San Diego Y.C. and Club des Yates de Acapulco. The race is expected to take between 10 and 12 days to complete.

THE GOLDEN GATE Yacht Club winds up its highly successful winter series in local yachting action tomorrow in San Francisco Bay.

All starts and finishes will be off the host clubhouse on the Marina Green. Courses will be established by the hoisting of a course flag on the flagstaff at the time of the preparatory signal for each class.

The races will start at 12:10 p.m. with the Caranita, Acorn, Treasure Island classes and Division 17 getting the initial starting gun.

MARIN SLOOP OFF FOR ACAPULCO

This is the 46-foot sloop "Amorita" owned by Henry Grandin of Ross which is entered in the San Diego-to-Acapulco Yacht Race which starts tomorrow. Skipper Grandin's crew will include Dr. Ted McCarthy of San Rafael, navigator and ship's doctor; Richard Owen of Corte Madera, who will manage the foredeck; Charles Ullman of Newport Beach, winner of the 1959 Transpacific Yacht Race; Fred Liebhardt of San Diego, Dick Enersen of San Francisco and Tony Davies of Boston. The Amorita is considered a strong contender in the Class B handicap competition for the estimated 10 to 12-day run to Acapulco.

Marin Tars Rally To 67-63 Win

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

WEED — Trailing 39-42 at halftime, College of Marin Tars rallied to a 67-63 victory over College of Siskiyous here last night to even their Golden Valley Conference basketball record at 2-2.

Marin Coach Cal Riemcke ordered a tight man-to-man defense starting the second half and it worked as the Tars held the hosts to only 9 field goals in the final 20 minutes as compared to 15 in the first half.

Another piece of Tar strategy worked to perfection: Once they took the lead with about five minutes to go on a field goal by Jay Johnson, the Tars went into a stall for the remainder of the game. Baskets on fast breaks by Johnson and Ron O'Connell in the waning minute provided Marin's margin of victory.

Johnson led Tar scorers with 22 points while Pete Bardea hit for 17, O'Connell 16, Bill Hodgson 7 and Brad Busch 5. Johnson scored well on fast breaks and on shots from around the key.

Riemcke credited the 6-foot-4 Bardea and 6-3 Hodgson for tremendous jobs on the backboards. Bardea snagged 9 defensive and 8 offensive rebounds and Hodgson 11 and 8.

Marin, which hit on 35 per cent of its floor shots, plays Shasta College tonight at Redding.

Palm Springs Golf Still In Deadlock

Sifford, tied for the lead after the first and second rounds of the Palm Springs Golf Classic, vowed he'd be alone in first place after round 3 of the 90-hole event.

But, for the third consecutive day, Sifford was still tied for the lead today—this time with British Open champion Bob Charles—going into the fourth round of the $50,000 event. Each had a 208, eight under par.

NATIONAL CHAMP

Sifford, the five-time national Negro champion, played at Bermuda Dunes Country Club yesterday and shot his second straight one-under-par 71. Charles, the left-handed swinger from New Zealand, played at the difficult Eldorado course and shot a 69, the second best round achieved there through the first 54 holes of the tournament. The classic is being played on four courses, all par-72.

Bill Casper Jr. came in with a 67 at Indian Wells yesterday and, at 209 was only a shot behind the two leaders. There was a four-way tie at 210 among Gene Littler, Bob Adamson, Jimmy Demaret and Randy Glover.

Bob Goalby and Art Wall Jr. were a stroke farther back and Bob Rosburg, Chuck Courtney, Bruce Devlin and Bruce Crampton were tied at 212.

Tommy Jacobs, tied with Sifford after 18 holes, shot a 74 yesterday and finished the round a half dozen strokes out of the lead at 214. Doug Sanders, tied with Sifford after round 2, shot a 77 and also came in at 214.

Jack Nicklaus, the defending champion here, was among 11 others at 214. He had a 69 yesterday.

Arnold Palmer shot a 72, had a three-round score of 221 and appeared in danger of failing to survive the cut after the fourth round. About half the 128 pros will be eliminated before the last 18 holes tomorrow.

GALS: STILL TIME TO ENTER BOWL TOURNEY

Entry deadline for the fourth annual Marin County Woman's Bowling Assn. championship tournament has been extended to next Wednesday, it was announced today by Mrs. Maxine Bryden, association president.

The tournament will be held at Greenbrae Lanes Feb. 8, 9, 15 and 16. The handicap tournament will include team, singles, doubles and all-events competition.

Opening ceremonies and tourney play will start on Feb. 8 at 7 p.m. On the other three days of the tourney, squad times will be at 1, 4 and 7 p.m.

UCLA Wins Again; Oregon Upsets Cal

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

UCLA's mighty combination just keeps rolling along. The No. 1-ranked Bruins did it again last night by defeating the University of California at Santa Barbara, 107-76, in non-conference basketball play.

It was the Bruins' 16th straight victory and they'll be out to make it 17 tonight when they take on Santa Barbara again at Santa Monica.

Walt Hazzard and Gail Goodrich and the UCLA full-court press accounted for the easy victory over the Gauchos. Hazzard and Goodrich shared scoring honors with 21.

The only team seriously challenging UCLA (6-0) in the Big Six these days is California (5-1). But the Bears hardly looked like a contender last night when they dropped a 77-63 non-league battle at Oregon. Soph Duck guard Jim Barnett gunned 17 shots and swished 10 to wind up with 26 points. Center Steve Jones hit 14 for the Ducks, but more important, he held Cal's big Camden Wall to eight points and out-rebounded him besides.

Burglars Give Up On Hospital Safe

The break-in was the first for the hospital, which opened last May 1.

William R. Brown, assistant administrator, said the intruders somehow managed to unlatch the front door of the hospital at Montecillo Road and Nova Albion Way after it was locked at 9:30 p.m. He said a mat was then used to prevent its relatching.

The burglars crossed the lobby to the business office, forced its door, and moved the huge safe from against the wall. Brown estimated the feat would take at least two men. He said they then fetched a wheelchair from the physical therapy room, apparently intending to cart the safe outside.

The attempt was abandoned, however. Instead, he said, they entered the nearby doctors' lounge, took the dictaphone, tried unsuccessfully to force a cigarette machine open, then exited via a window.

The break-in was discovered at 12:30 a.m. today by a night nurse.

First Gas Lights

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI)— Louisville, Ky., became the first city in the American West to acquire gas lights in 1840.

Sanitary Contract Rescinded

The Novato Sanitary District board Thursday night rescinded a contract awarded on Jan. 16, and gave a $189,975 contract to Granite Construction Co. of Watsonville for enlargement of the Novato treatment plant.

The original contract of $138,900 was awarded to the C. Norman Peterson Co. of Berkeley, lowest of nine bidders when the bids were opened Jan. 16. He subsequently proved that the bid contained a $42,555 error, said Charles Joseph, engineer-manager of the district.

Granite Construction Co. was next lowest bidder.

James T. Morton, attorney for the district, told the board it could not adjust the Peterson bid, although it still would have been the low bid, with the $42,555 error.

The board hired Mrs. Roberta Enoch of 1367 Monte Marie, Novato, as a new secretary-clerical assistant at $400 per month.

Hearst Land Exchange Gaining

A proposed exchange of Hearst Corp. land for National Forest land in the McCloud River area has moved a step closer to completion, according to the U. S. Forest Service.

Regional Forester Charles A. Connaughton has given his approval to the Hearst Corp.'s offer and forwarded it to the chief of the Forest Service, Washington, D. C., for consideration.

This followed action by the board of directors of Hearst Corp. and endorsement by the boards of supervisors in Siskiyou and Shasta counties.

The final decision as to whether to accept the offer to exchange 28,418 acres of its land for 22,160 acres of Shasta National Forest land will be made by the secretary of agriculture.

The purpose of the proposal is to consoldate land ownership in the vicinity of McCloud River. This will facilitate management of the land by the private owners and will offer the public access to some excellent outdoor recreation areas.

Candy Mints Might Be Good—But Illegal

Four Oakland juveniles, all with minor police records, were in Marin County Juvenile Hall yesterday in connection with soliciting money through the sale of mint candy in the Terra Linda area.

They were arrested by San Rafael police and Marin County sheriff's officers at 6:15 p.m. Thursday. Officers said the youths, aged 12 through 16, were brought to San Rafael yesterday by a Hayward man with instructions to sell the candy for $1 a package from house to house.

The boys were to explain that money received would be used to keep them "off the streets," officers added. Police said the man kept 65 cents per package, and the boys, 35 cents.

Police were seeking the man yesterday for possible charges of illegal soliciting and having no San Rafael business license, they said.

San Rafael School Bond Vote Backed

The Board of Directors of the Central Marin League of Women Voters has voted to support the bond issue for the San Rafael Elementary School District on Feb. 18, it was announced today by Mrs. William C. Anderson, president.

The election will ask for 3.3 million dollars for additions to existing schools, site purchase for new schools and construction of two new schools, and $670,000 for construction of multi-purpose rooms at nine elementary schools.

VIEW HOMES IN THE ROLLING HILLS OF MARIN

3 and 4 Bedrooms • 2 Baths • Family Room

PRICES START AT $32,000

BEST FINANCING TERMS AVAILABLE

Nestled in the rolling hills of Marin, overlooking the beautiful bay, these magnificent homes present an exciting new adventure in luxurious living. Unique new designs offer a multitude of choices for your comfort and pleasure. In a most interesting plan, an entirely new concept in home design, the activity room and guest room are located in a separate area of the home . . . insuring absolute privacy. For gracious hospitality, some plans have formal dining rooms . . . with a step down to the living areas and family rooms. The fireplaces are large, distinctive and attractive.

But . . . WHERE you live is just as important as HOW you live, and this complete community offers you every city advantage . . . almost at your doorstep.

The regional shopping center includes Purity Super Market, banks, drugstore and restaurant, and others. Under construction is the Emporium's new installation and coming off the plans board shortly will be Roos-Atkin's new location. In addition are churches, medical and dental facilities and a well equipped hospital.

Your Children, no matter what age (elementary, junior and senior high), are off to school and back again with no commuting problems.

There are recreational activities for the entire family. You and your children will enjoy swimming, golfing, boating, horseback riding, Pony and Little League baseball, and Pop Warner football.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

It's Bad For Person To Be Bitten By Animal—But Man's Bite Is Worse

VAN DELLEN

Aleutian-mink disease was discovered several years ago and is known to exist in most mink raising areas. It is a slow, smoldering ailment and may exist for months before the animal appears ill. The liver, spleen, and kidneys enlarge and the blood vessels are involved. In time, 90 per cent of the affected animals die.

SEVERAL years ago, Dr. Irving Chapman and Dr. Fidelio A. Jiminez cared for a mink raiser who died but the cause remained a mystery, despite careful autopsy. The patient told of having been bitten repeatedly by these animals, and a relationship between the two was suspected but could not be proved.

These medicos persisted in searching the medical literature and finally were rewarded with a description of Aleution-mink disease. The results of the microscopic studies of the tissues of the dead mink were the same as those of the patient who had raised these animals. Will more case histories appear, now that the disorder is recognized as a possible hazard in the industry?

RABIES is the most widely known of all diseases transmitted from mammals to man. Cat scratch fever is less serious but some victims develop prolonged and disabling symptoms. Fever, weakness, headache, enlarged lymph glands, and a red rash are the most common manifestations.

Man's bite is extremely hazardous, as the human mouth teems with millions of bacteria. These organisms may cause infection if introduced under the skin and could prove fatal if blood poisoning ensues. Cleansing the wound thoroughly with plenty of hot water and soap or an antiseptic detergent is the best defense against this complication.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

SAND NO LAXATIVE

J. K. writes: I'm 74 years old and no remedy suggested so far has cured my constipation. Someone told me that taking a teaspoon of sand every day will help. If chickens and ducks can eat it, maybe I can. What do you think?

REPLY

You are no chicken and we can assume you thrive on constipation, considering your age. Many birds with no teeth eat sand and pebbles, which help break up the food in the gastrointestinal tract.

ANNIVERSARY REACTION

A. M. writes: My wife has Meniere's disease, which she can keep under control fairly well with antihistamine preparation. But every October for the last three years she has had to be hospitalized for this condition. Would you have any idea why?

REPLY

No, unless she suffers from an anniversary reaction to an unhappy or unfortunate event that occurred in October.

AFTER STROKE

Y. M. writes: My mother, in her 50s, had a stroke recently. I want to do everything possible to help her recover. What suggestions can you make?

REPLY

Follow your physician's advice to the letter. In addition, send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on stroke, which contains various helpful suggestions along this line.

MANY STRUCTURES AFFECTED

W. D. writes: Can lupus erythematosus exist without skin symptoms?

REPLY

Yes. Joint and muscular pains may exist for some time before the rash appears. This is a generalized disease involving many organs, including the skin. Not all are affected at the same time.

COLD HANDS

Mrs. J. C. writes: My husband is healthy at age 82 but his hands always are cold. Have you any helpful suggestions for this condition?

REPLY

This is difficult to correct at any age. Coldness usually is caused by poor circulation and can be minimized by keeping the body warm with adequate clothing, including gloves, and remaining in a warm environment.

EYES SHOULD BE USED

W. F. writes: I use my eyes all my waking hours. What can be done to maintain the eyes at peak performance?

REPLY

Continue to use them.

Landmarks Kept On Film By Club

The Ross Valley Camera Club has started a campaign to capture Marin County's historical landmarks on film before they give way to subdivisions or other developments.

Waldemar Doyal, club president, said he is checking to see what photos of landmarks are available for safekeeping by the Marin County Historical Society.

He also is seeking a list of historical sites so club members can go out and get photos. "We'd like to develop a list of places we're likely to lose to development," he said.

Doyal displayed a salon print of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad depot at Ignacio, now demonished, as an example of the type of work that will preserve county landmarks.

Frank Galli of the Marin County Historical Society wrote county supervisors last week requesting that there be an ordinance requiring governmental agencies to notify the society whenever a development threatens to destroy a landmark.

Septic Tank Problem Is Near Solution

That house with the full septic tank on Bolinas Mesa is still occupied, but a solution appears near, according to William L. Desmond, director of sanitation in the Marin County Health Department.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Matthews, with their daughter, Jane, purchased and moved into the house on Nymph Road on October, 1962. Soon after, the septic tank filled up and has been running over ever since.

Matthews said the house was sold to him by contractor Earl Baldwin of Mill Valley as a two-bedroom house, but the county building permit was issued for a one-bedroom house.

Desmond said today, that Baldwin's attorney, Hilary Crawford of San Francisco, has offered to rebuild or enlarge the septic system or else take back the house.

"As long as they (the owners and the builder) are still talking to each other, we're willing to wait," Desmond said.

An eviction date for the Matthews, originally set by the health department for Jan. 1, was extended to Jan. 31. Now the department is granting 10-day extensions. "We want to give them time to do something," Desmond said.

Desmond suggested drainage ditches on the side of neighboring lots to take off surface water before it gets onto the Matthews 4,000-square-foot lot.

Mrs. Matthews said today that the Bolinas Beach Improvement Club has formally protested this solution, fearing that polluted water would be turned into open ditches on the street.

Mrs. Matthews also said that Donald Pepper of Bolinas, who does work on septic tanks, has told her that the lot is too small to handle the sewage and a solution is not possible unless the Matthewses acquire adjacent land. Prevous efforts to acquire land have failed, Mrs. Matthews said.

Teen Car Strippers Causing Big Headache

By ARTHUR J. McGINN

It's the teen-age car stripper whose deftness at lifting expensive parts from high speed automobiles might prompt pit mechanics at Indienapolis Speedway to professional jealousy.

The hottest items at "Midnight auto," as the practice of stripping cars is called, are big engines and fast-shift transmissions. And some thrieves can steal, strip and abandon the hulk in the space of two hours flat—even if it means cutting a door out for elbow room.

Fifteen years ago the strippers, most of whom are under 18 years of age, confined themselves to hubcaps, tires, radio aerials and an occasional radio.

During a recent seven month period, 100 Chevrolet Corvettes were stolen in the San Francisco Bay Area and 65 of them turned up on dark streets or remote areas with an average of about $2,000 in parts missing.

"In one case, two hours after the car was stolen it was found abandoned and the transmission was gone. They had cut out the door to get at it," Mayhugh says.

"They use the stuff for their own cars. Some of it shows up on drag strips. They've blown up their own equipment so they steal some more."

About 62,000 thefts were reported during 1963 and the biggest "theft period" is just coming to a close. That's between September and January when seasonal work is low and thieves "need a few bucks," he says.

Most of the thieves are 16 to 20 years old—80 per cent are under 21—and temptation often stares them in the face. About half the cars stolen have keys in the ignition or the ignition is unlocked.

The number of cars stolen in the state has doubled since 1952 when 26,000 were stolen. The figure may reach 110,000 thefts a year by 1970.

"Law enforcement techniques have failed," Mayhugh says. "If they hadn't most the thieves would have been arrested. Instead, the cars are usually found abandoned."

Mayhugh says faster and better communications for checking on car thefts are needed at the police precinct level but that police also must receive more fundamental training to meet the growing problem.

"It's the uniformed officer in the field who has the best opportunity to nab thieves," he says, noting that special training, such as courses in how to spot a stolen car, has raised arrests as high as 43 per cent.

Firm Requests Dredging Permit

The Temple City firm of Finley-Carpenter Inc., has applied for a Department of Army permit to accomplish channel dredging in marsh lands on the westerly side of Petaluma River about a mile upstream of the State Highway 37 near Black Point in Marin County.

The main channels would be dredged to a depth of eight feet below mean lower low water. A small channel would be dredged to a three foot depth, according to the Army Corps of Engineers' San Francisco district office.

Navigational objections by interested persons may be submitted in writing in triplicate not later than 30 days from last Thursday.

San Anselman Hurt In Two-Car Crash

Edwin Thomas Ray, 54, of 112 San Francisco Boulevard, San Anselmo, suffered minor abrasions in a two-car collision on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, 1.3 miles west of Fairfax, at 10 p.m. yesterday.

Ray told the California Highway Patrol that another car swerved into his lane and collided with his auto. CHP officers are seeking the driver of the other car who reportedly left the scene. Ray was treated for his injuries at home.

2-Year-Old Girl Injured In Crash

Martha Logan, 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Van Norden Logan of Fernhill Avenue, Ross,, suffered a minor head cut Thursday in a two-car collision at Ross Avenue and Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in San Anselmo. She was treated at Marin General Hospital.

Police said the car driven south on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard by her mother, Ann, 32, about 10:45 a.m. collided with a car driven west by Donald Ray Sartain, 24, of Mountain View. Mrs. Logan was cited for failure to halt at a red traffic light.

Savings Bond Sales

Sale of U. S. Savings Bonds in Marin totaled $113,233 during December, Newton McCarthy, state director of the savings bond division of the United States Treasury Department, announced today.

Two Dogs Killed Attacking Sheep

West Marin dairy rancher Manuel S. Peters told sheriff's deputies yesterday he killed two dogs who were attacking his sheep off Olema Road near Bolinas.

Peters said he was eating lunch at home when he looked outside and saw some of his sheep huddled in a corner. Two dogs were chasing a few stragglers. He grabbed a .410-gauge shotgun and shot the dogs, he said, to save his sheep.

One of the dogs was a boxer named Sasha, owned by Arthur E. Carpenter, Bolinas School District trustee. The other was an unidentified black and white dog.

Novato Master Plan

Marin's Peaceful Hills And Lonely Coastline

This sweeping aerial view is a study in contrast between Marin's rural hillsides and the cluster of buildings in the distant City.

Joining the rural and the metropolitan is the Golden Gate Bridge. Tracing the landmarks from the bridge up the coastline one spots Point Diablo near the bridge, then Point Bonita, jutting out farthest to the right.

Rodeo Lagoon is just north of Point Bonita, then Tennessee Point and Tennessee Cove. North of the cliffs, the next large cove is Muir Beach.

Closest point is called Rocky Point. Off the headland south of it is Gull Rock. In the foreground can be seen the thin ribbon of Highway 1 between Stinson Beach and Muir Beach. The road turns inland at Frank Valley and forks, with one fork leading east to Muir Woods.

Just west of the bridge, along the coast are Forts Baker, Barry and Cronkhite, in that order. A move for state acquisition of these federal lands is now underway. If purchased, the forts would become parks.

The Dane's A Dog With Dignity

See Page M-2

The Case For The Great Dane

A Marin Dog Owner Tells You Why They Are Her Favorite Breed

By DON KEOWN

So you have always admired the Great Dane, but have felt you lacked the space necessary to keep such a large dog?

Then, says Mrs. Edith Weldon of Belveron Gardens on the Tiburon Peninsula, you've been the victim of one of the several myths that have grown up around the breed.

TO BACK UP that assertion she can point to her own Ladymeade Celandine, better known as Cammie.

Cammie stands 31 inches high at the shoulder and weighs approximately 150 pounds. But she is perfectly happy in the four-room Weldon home and its small yard. And she spends the day, while Mrs. Weldon is at her job as a "Meter Maid" in San Rafael and daughter Cathy, 14, is in school, confined to the kitchen. And quite content to be there.

This ease with which the Great Dane can adjust to the small home is only one of several reasons why Mrs. Weldon prefers the breed to all other dogs.

THE GENTLE nature of the Great Dane makes it a natural companion for children, she says. Yet, the Dane is also an excellent watch dog, intelligent enough to differentiate between intruder and invited guest.

The short hair of the Great Dane means less care.

And finally, there is that characteristic dignity of the Dane's regal carriage and coat.

Cammie is Mrs. Weldon's fourth Great Dane—but her first to enjoy real success in the show ring. Cammie was well on her way to her championship when an infection last fall necessitated an operation that ended her show career. But the Weldon home contains a number of trophies and ribbons that serve as mementoes of Cammie's successes.

EDITH WELDON remembers that, from childhood on, she has always had dogs around her. But those earlier canines were mixed breeds, beloved pets but not show dogs. Then, 14 years ago, she acquired Lady Louise of Lestomuir, a black Great Dane.

She explains: "My aunt and uncle owned the half brother to Lady Louise. I liked their dog so much that I decided to buy a Great Dane of my own."

But she proved to be an ideal pet. And it was Lady Louise who helped little Cathy learn to walk.

After Lady Louise, Mrs. Weldon owned two more Great Danes that failed to set the show ring afire. Then came her opportunity to acquire Cammie from Carmen Pokorny of Pacifica.

BEING AT that time without a dog, Mrs. Weldon had gone to Los Altos to contact breeder Gladys M. Jewell about the possibility of purchasing a puppy. There she met Mrs. Pokorny, who offered to sell her Cammie.

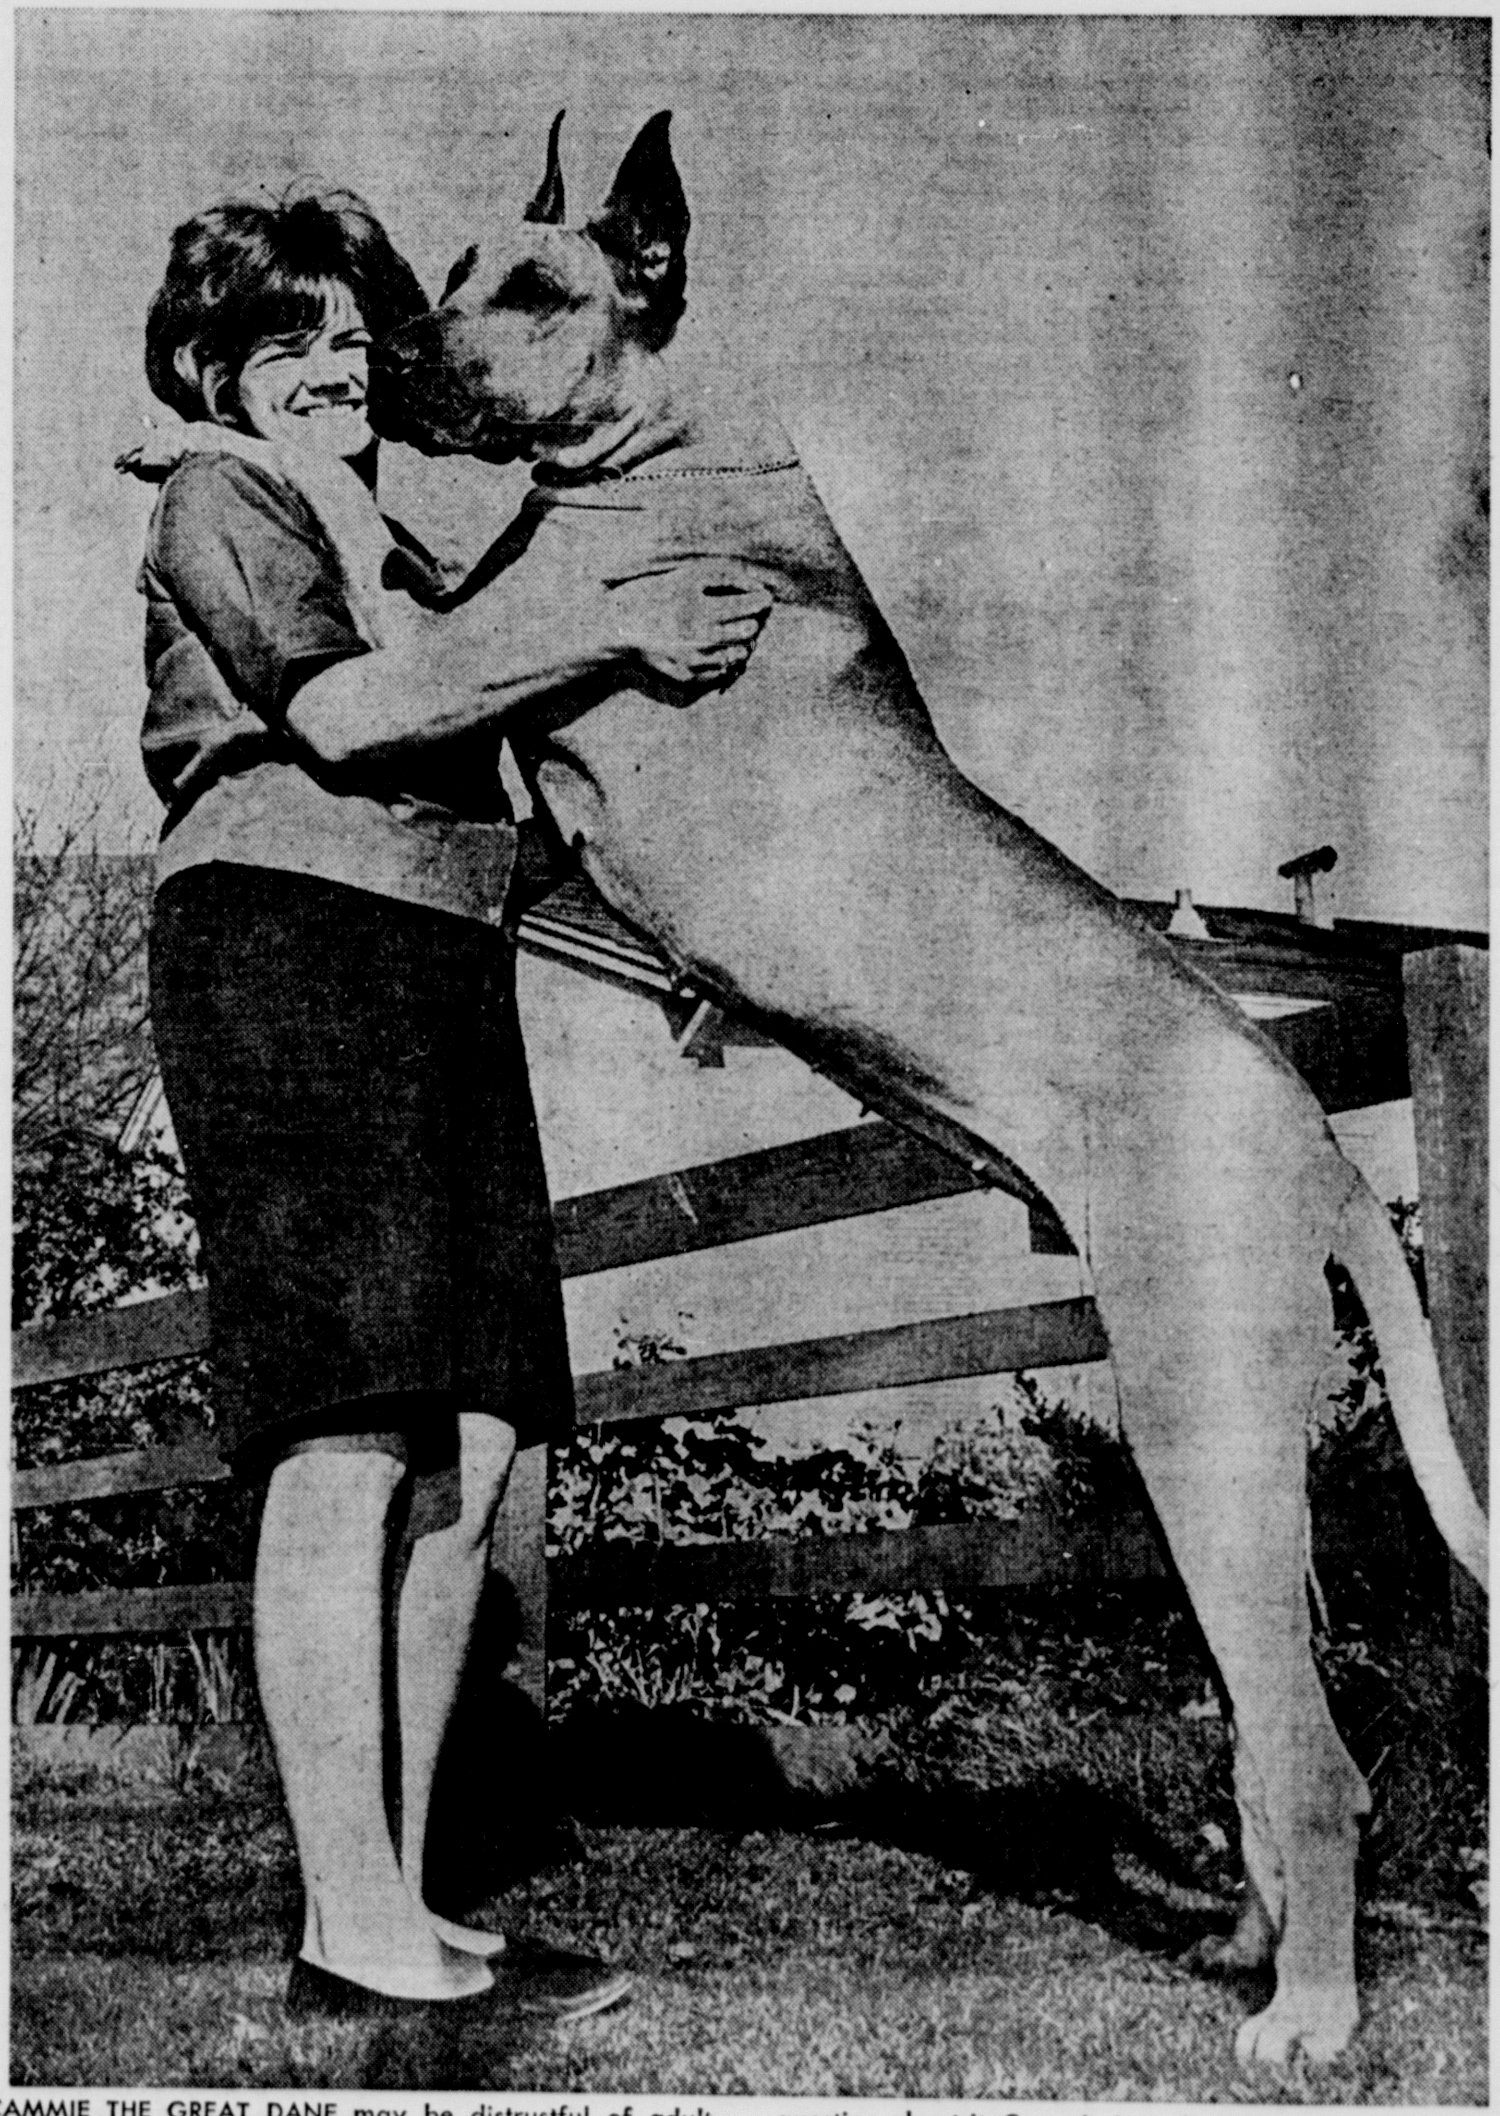

The Pacifica woman owned several other dogs and therefore was unable to show Cammie the affection and attention which she thought the dog needed and deserved. So, although Cammie had already earned several points toward her championship, she deliberately set a low price tag on her dog, confident that Mrs. Weldon would provide Cammie with a good home.

"I'm still a long way from being an expert," Mrs. Weldon says, "and at that time, I knew virtually nothing about show dogs. But I took Mrs. Pokorny's word for it that Cammie was an outstanding Great Dane. And I was not misled."

CAMMIE, bred by Mrs. Jewell, was the offspring of a champion sire, Ladymeade Digby, owned by Mrs. Pokorny, and the dam Ladymeade Adagio.

Under Mrs. Weldon's ownership and with Mrs. Marjorie Brooks of Daly City as her handler throughout her show ring career, she went on to score more victories. Her biggest win came in the San Ma-

CAMMIE THE GREAT DANE may be distrustful of adult strangers, but she loves all children. Her special favorite is 14-year-old Cathy Weldon, daughter of Cammie's owner, Mrs. Edith Weldon. Admits Mrs. Weldon: "There is no question about it. Cammie is really Cathy's dog." Here the two pals enjoy a romp in the meadow behind the Weldon home in Belveron Gardens on the Tiburon Peninsula.

teo Dog Show of November, 1962, when judge William Pym awarded her best of breed over three champion dogs and placed her second in the working group.

The operation the following month ended Cammie's bid for championship status just short of that goal.

Mrs. Weldon says she plans to acquire another Great Dane some day and return to the show ring wars.

"The dog shows have come to mean a lot to me," she says. "They have become my hobby."

TWO GREAT Danes in a single four-room house? There would be no difficulty, she says. She has a friend who owns seven of the Danes and all live in the house.

Cammie, says Mrs. Weldon, "is more Cathy's dog than she is mine." Although the Great Dane loves all children, a special bond has grown up between Cathy and Cammie during the year and a half the Weldons have had the dog.

But perhaps more important than the former role of show dog and the present role of pet is Cammie's continuing role as watchdog.

Mrs. Weldon is a widow, and she and her daughter live alone. But with Cammie in the house, there are no burglar worries.

With other dogs, Cammie gets along just fine.

"Sassie is the one who is always trying to pick a fight with the neighbor dogs," Mrs. Weldon says. "Cammie is big enough she doesn't have to fight. They leave her strictly alone."

THE GREAT Dane's past history is shrouded in mystery. Some historians believe the Great Dane is the true descendant of the Molossus dog shown on Greek and Roman statuary. There is a Grecian coin dating from the fifth century B.C. on which is represented a dog closely resembling a Dane. Carvings of such giant dogs are found on some of the oldest Egyptian monuments.

ture of Irish Wolfhound and Old English Mastiff.

Like all the older varieties of dog, the Dane was developed for a serious useful purpose. The Germans used him for hunting boars and deer. To tackle the dangerous wild boar required a super-dog. But the Great Dane was equal to the task.

THROUGH THE years, the Great Dane has been known under a variety of other names, the most popular of which is German Mastiff. He's also been called the Danish Dog, the Deutsche Dogge, a wild boar hound, the Siberian Dog, the Ulm Dog, etc.

Whatever the name, it is an old breed that has existed for many centuries.

Through the years the Great Dane has enjoyed a steady if not spectacular climb in popularity.

Perhaps the first Great Dane in North America was a male owned by a Francis Butler of New York in 1857. During the next 20 years, a number of Danes were imported so that in 1878 the Westminster Kennel Club Show provided a class for these giant dogs under the name "Siberian or Ulm Dogs" and there was a total of 11 entries.

IN THE 1886 Westminster show, they were classified for the first time as Great Danes. And the following year, the first Great Dane champion, Juno, owned by Osceola Kennels of Osceola, Wis., was recorded.

In 1889 what was to become the Great Dane Club of America was organized in Chicago, under the name German Mastiff Club, and that same year it became the fourth club to become affiliated with the American Kennel Club.

The Danes had been awarded a classification of their own at sanctioned American shows in 1886, three years after they had been accorded that recognition in Great Britain under the name boar hound.

THE GREAT DANE Club of England had been formed in 1882, the German Great Dane Club in 1888.

From those beginnings, the registration and the showing of Great Danes continued to mount steadily until by the mid-1940s the 3,000-mark was passed in registered Danes.

Well, generally for that distinguished appearance, dignity, strength and elegance along with great size that characterize the Great Dane. With his powerful, well-formed body, he has been called "the Apollo of dogs."

The coat is very short and thick, smooth and glossy. The color may be brindled yellow with strong black cross stripes, deep golden yellow with black mask and black nails, a pure steel blue without tinge of yellow or black, a glossy black or harlequin with pure white as the base color and irregular black spots.

THE IMPRESSIVE head is long, narrow, expressive, finely chiseled. Eyes are medium in size, and should be as dark as possible and with a lively intelligent expression. Ears should be high set not too far apart, and medium in size. The nose must be large and, in the case of brindled and single-colored Danes, must always be black. Strong teeth, broad chest, muscular and sinewy neck, and a trunk with the withers forming the highest part of a strong back are just a few of the other traits for which the judges award their coveted points.

Indicative of the increased popularity of Great Danes in this area was the formation in March of 1963 of the Great Dane Club of Central California with some 35 members from Marin, the Peninsula and the East Bay.

At the recent Golden Gate Kennel Club Dog Show in San Francisco, members of the new club were responsible for 21 of the 45 Great Dane entries.

Mrs. Weldon and Art Thomson of San Rafael are on the club's board of directors.

THE CLUB members are dedicated to spreading the word about the merits of their favorite breed. But they do not expect the Great Dane ever to zoom to the top of the registration list. It is, they agree, not the dog for everyone.

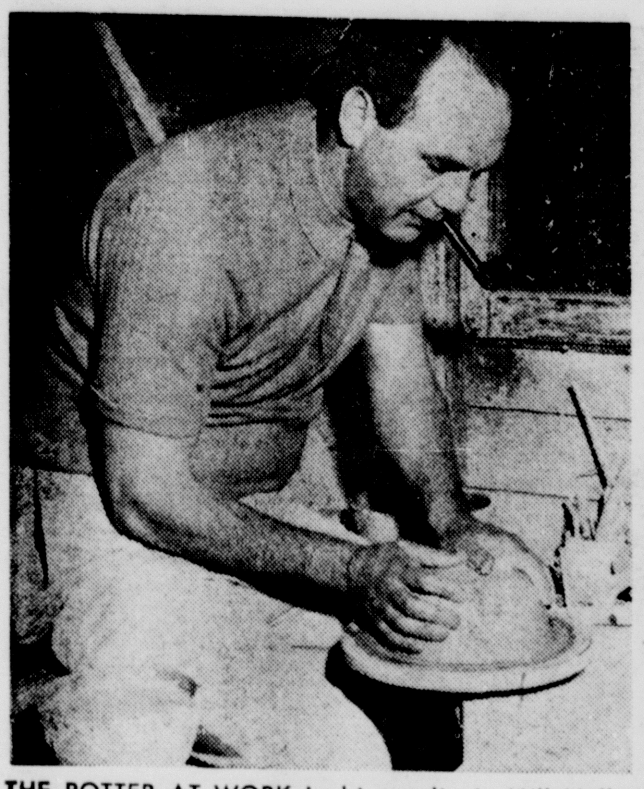

The owner who acquires a Great Dane should first be willing to give the animal the affection, companionship and care upon which they thrive.

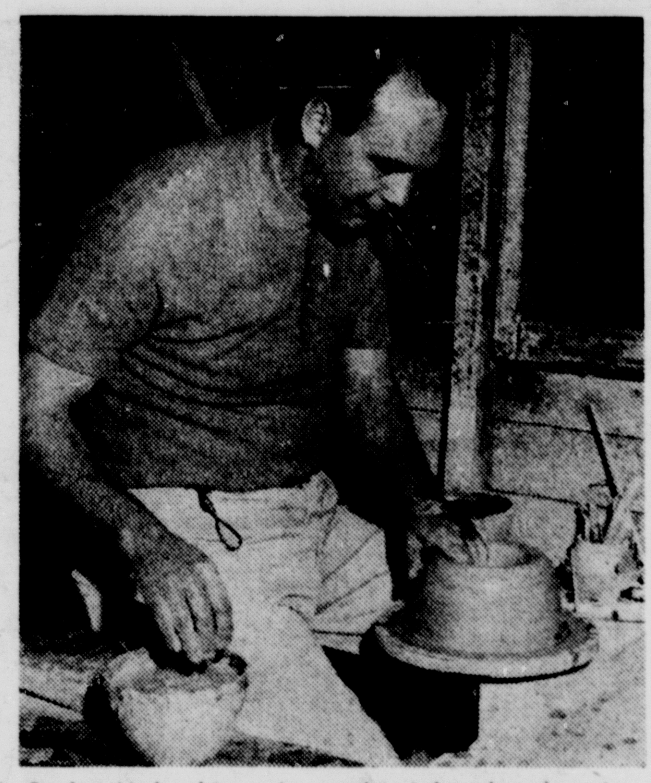

Given that, the Great Dane owners say, their dogs become more than just pets or show animals—they become loyal and faithful friends, with a noble bearing, a gentle disposition and an intelligent comprehension that sets them apart.

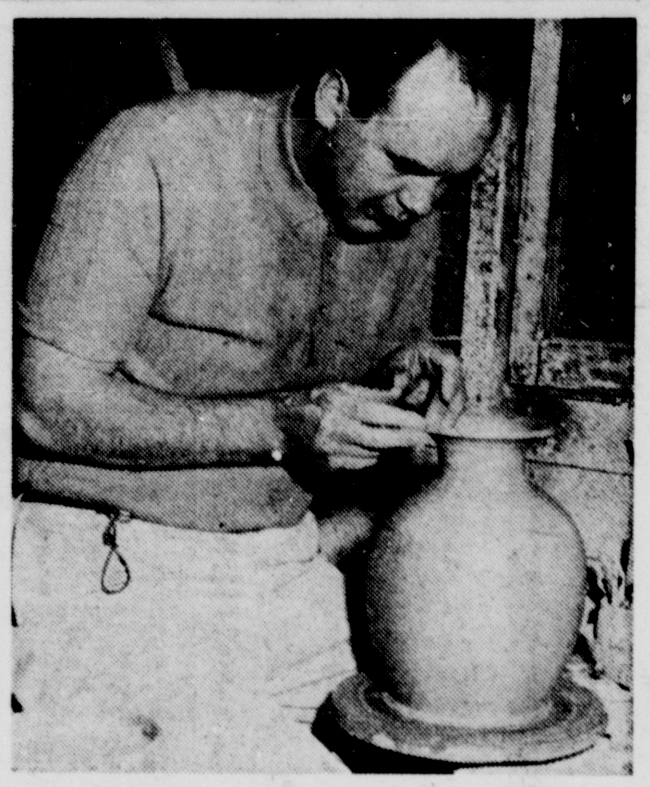

A PROUD CAMMIE, with some help from Cathy Weldon, shows you some of the trophies which she brought back from her final appearance in the show ring at Sacramento. Shortly after that triumph, an infection necessitated an operation that ended Cammie's career as a show dog. Now she's a much-loved pet, watchdog and companion.

A Kick Wheel, Two Kilns And Talent

By DON KEOWN

Sasha Makovkin was a young student of architecture at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver in the early 1950s when he happened to enroll in an extension class in pottery.

As a result, today he designs—and makes—vases and pots instead of buildings.

"Some months are awfully lean, and some are fat," he smiles. "But we get by."

MAKOVKIN says his interest in the arts predates his enrollment in the pottery class at the University of British Columbia. But it was the natural talent for pottery making that he displayed in that class that decided him upon his future career.

He completed his university studies, switching to majors in English and economics. But his goal was to make pottery his profession.

The director of the UBC workshop turned a key over to Makovkin, and he was free to come and go as he wished. Most of his evenings were spent at the potter's wheel.

While he was still a university student, he was invited by the Department of Architecture to teach fabrication of ceramic tile to the future architects.

AND IN 1953 he won a Canadian national award for a group of pottery pieces submitted to Montreal. The following year he captured first prize in ceramics at the university's art gallery, and one of his vases was purchased for the school's permanent collection.

The sale which Makovkin remembers best was the first one. A small bottle brought him five dollars.

"It's a tremendous experience to sell something you've made with your hands," he says. "It gives you hope."

THEN HE adds: "Of course, sales are no criterion of the fineness of one's work. But you have to eat."

In 1954, Makovkin with wife Joyce, also a UBC graduate, came to California and the Bay Area.

"Actually, we thought we were headed for Italy," he says. "But first, I had to work and earn some money. And we heard there was work for a potter in the San Francisco area."

THEY FOUND a home on the Panoramic Highway above Mill Valley, and Makovkin went to work for Heath Ceramics of Sausalito.

That experience in industrial ceramics he now regards as "very valuable to me."

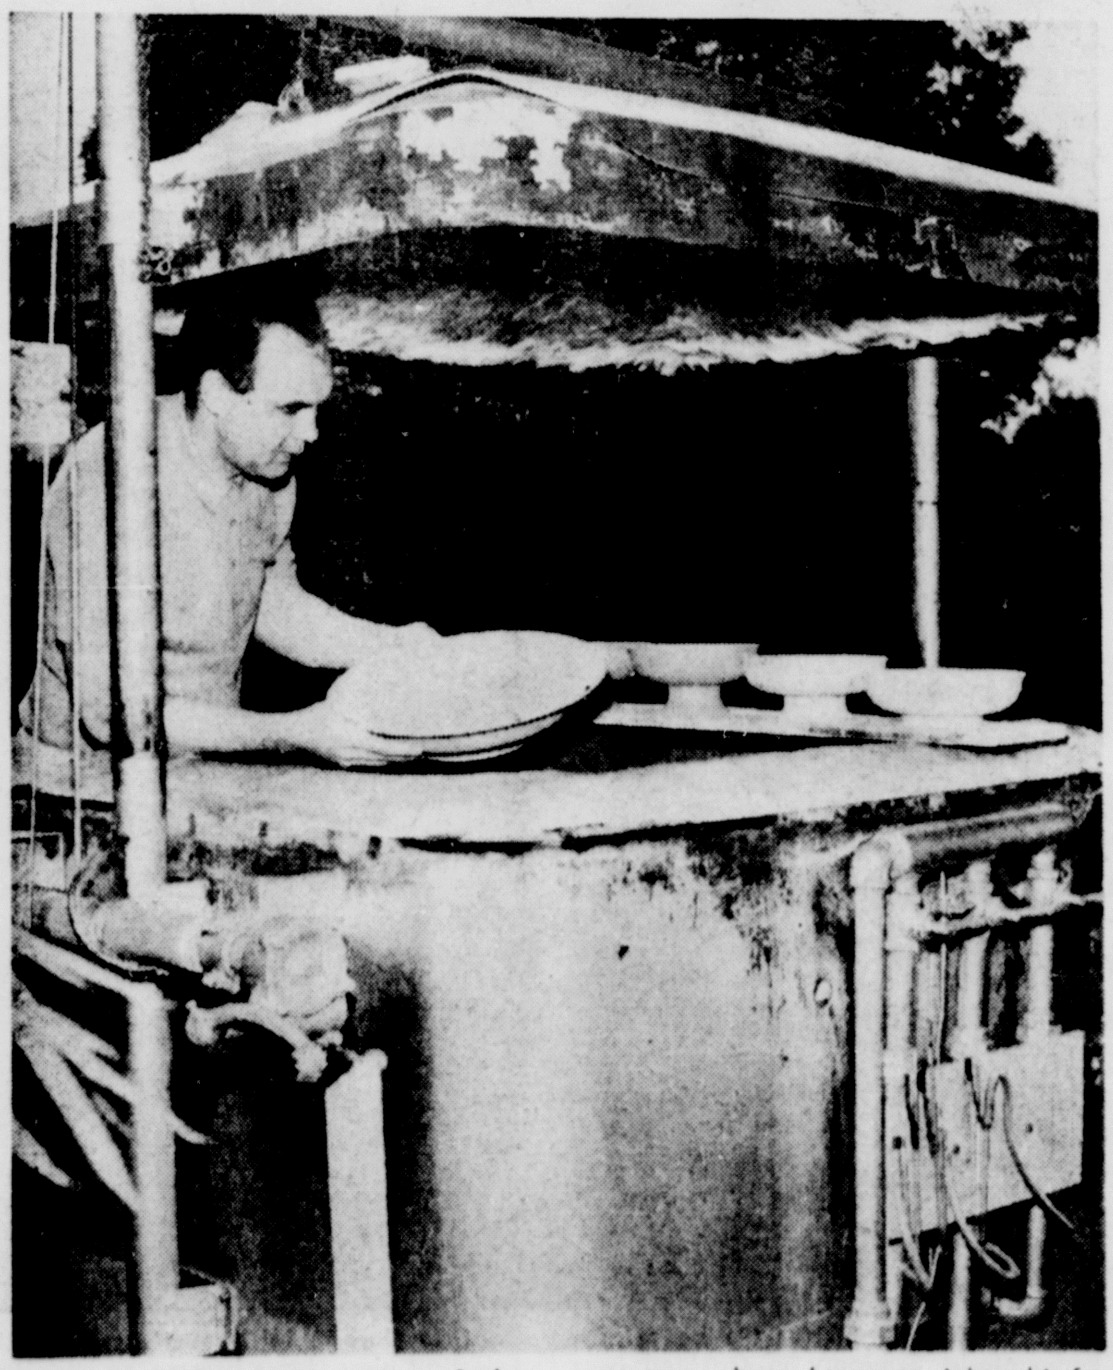

Brian and Edith Heath were, he says, sympathetic employers "who understood my problems." With Heath, Makovkin did "a little bit of everything," winding up as production manager.

In the meantime, he had been operating a small side business of pottery making from a studio in his home. In 1960, he left Heath and concentrated full-time upon his own work.

TWO YEARS ago, the Makovkins moved to the Almonte home which provides Sasha with a studio—once a garden building—adjacent to the house, and with a converted basement bedroom whose mahogany paneling makes an ideal display setting for his pottery.

"We had a hard time of it at first," he says, "but we were used to thrifty living. And one of the things you learn is that you can live on amazingly little money if that is all you have. Our expenses dropped way down, and we were able to pay the bills every month."

Income from Makovkin's work has been increasing steadily. One of his major sources are the ecclesiastical pieces which have become something of a specialty for him.

MOST OF Makovkin's sales are made directly from his studio. He does, however, have some retail outlets in Marin and San Francisco.

"I do very little selling," he says. "I don't go out and peddle my work. My customers come to me.

"When Gump's in San Francisco became an outlet, I stopped looking for more."

eight cubic feet in size, the other three cubic feet.

It is not unusual for Makovkin to work all day and all night.

"IF I HAVE an idea going, I have to keep working until it is executed," he explains.

Wife Joyce and their two children, Timothy, 8, and Alexandra (Koko), 5, also have their jobs in the studio.

BOTH CHILDREN, their father says, have artistic inclinations, and like to make their own creations from the clay.

Since coming to California, Makovkin has had intensive study with Marguerite Wildenhain at Guerneville. He won the architectural award of the Assn. of San Francisco Potters in 1956 and purchase awards from the San Francisco Art Commission in 1960 and 1962.

In 1958, he was included in a circulating show of the American Federation of Artists, and in 1962 he taught at the Mendocino Art Center.

WHILE MOST potters lean toward the Oriental, Makovkin says "my origins are primarily European. I just feel more at home with the European, because that's where my roots lie, and I draw from them." The name—Makovkin—is Russian.

"We're happy here in Marin," he says.

Both the Makovkins have applied for their American citizenship papers.

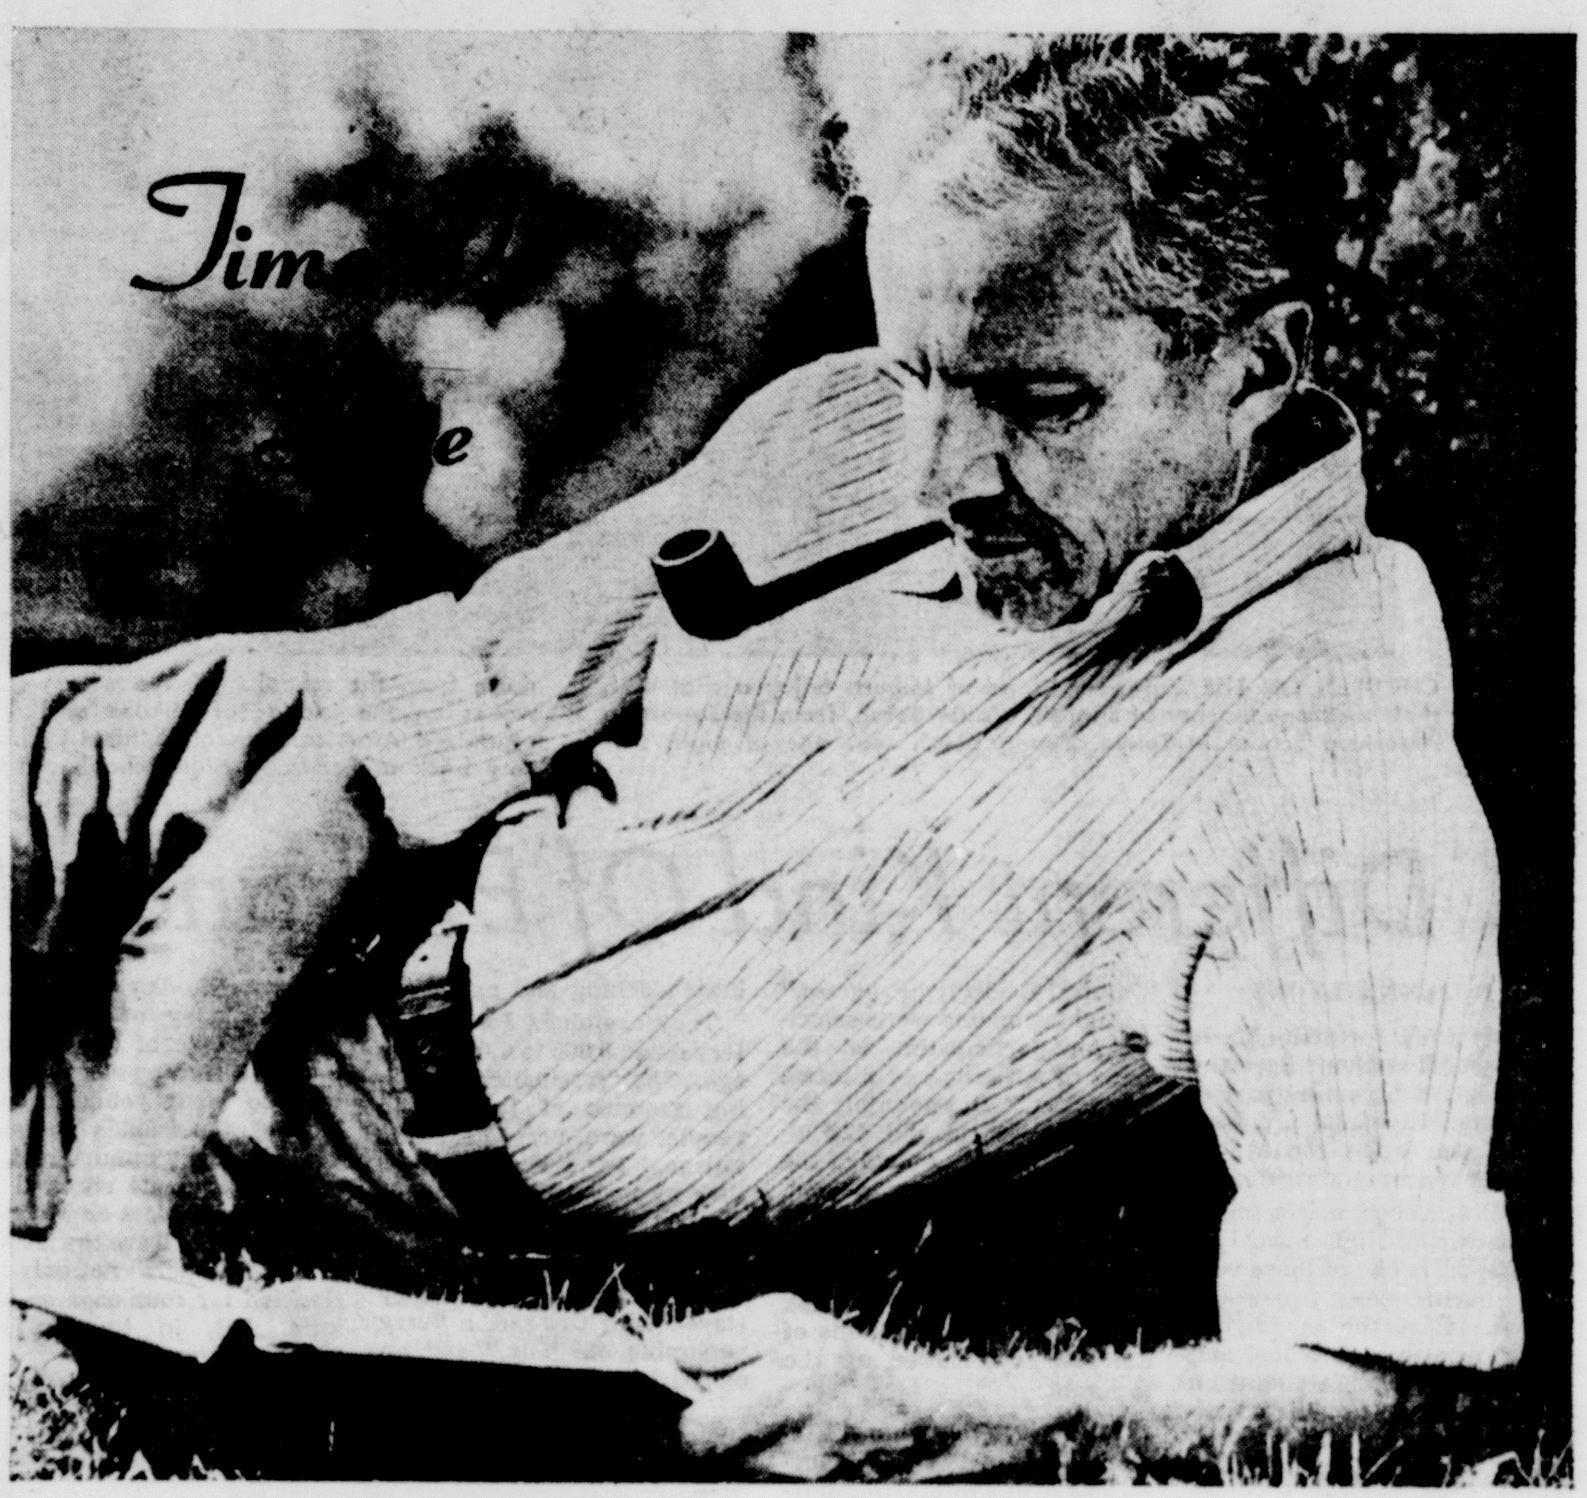

OF HIS work, Makovkin says: "You can't create in a vacuum. The artist and craftsman must consider what has gone on before him. Innovation just for the sake of innovation only causes a built-in obsolescence, for it will be discarded just as soon as it is no longer the vogue, even though the material would last for generations. The concept of obsolescence has invaded even the arts.

This, Makovkin feels, will give his pieces an enduring quality. Who knows? Perhaps his pots and vases will yet outlast the buildings he would have designed, had he not happened to enroll in that extension class a decade ago.

ALONG WITH his pottery, Sasha Makovkin also does some sculpture such as the man's hand seen here. But even then, the sculpture is done in the manner of a potter, built "hollow" so that the tension of the material supplies the form rather than the mass. (Independent-Journal photo)

CHILDREN ON THE Japanese island of Mikura enjoy a chat with their teen-age teacher of English, Walter Beech, from the Japanese American School in Tokyo. Young Beech was one of eight students from the school in Tokyo who were chosen to spend two weeks on the islands of Mikura and Miyake under a newly-organized American School Cultural Exchange Program. Beech is now back at Redwood High School, completing his senior year.

A Different Kind Of Exchange Program

By JENNIE LYONS

Only a few fortunate Marin high school students have the privilege of becoming part of a foreign exchange program. Still fewer enjoy the experience of teaching abroad.

Walter Beech, now a senior at Redwood High School in Larkspur, is one of those very few, having spent two weeks as an instructor in English for Japanese high school and junior high school students on the islands of Miyake and Mikura.

AT THE TIME Beech was visiting his father, who has been living in Japan recently, and was attending the Japanese American School in Tokyo.

Last summer Jack Moyer, an instructor there in history, language and the culture of Japan, initiated an experimental program which he entitled the "American School Cultural Exchange Program."

Eight students were selected for participation on the basis of aptitude and interest from the 450 attending the grammar school and 425 attending the high school of the Japanese American School. Seven of them had lived at least half their lives in Japan. Beech was the only one who did not speak Japanese. Six were girls, with Beech one of but two boys chosen for the program.

LIFE FOR the young "student teachers" was as luxurious as it was interesting during their brief stints on the two islands which are members of the Izu group located 100 miles south of Tokyo.

Beech describes the islands as "volcanic, tropical and rainy." Miyake, he adds, contains one of Japan's most dangerous still active volcanos. Only two years ago it had erupted so violently that 2,500 of the inhabitants had to be evacuated.

THE "TEACHERS" began their task of instructing English classes at the three junior high schools and one senior high school on Miyake and one junior high school on Mikura.

With the other boy involved in the program, Victor Lee, Beech spent four days on Mikura teaching and exploring.

They examined Jomon pottery made 6,000 to 7,000 years ago. The "fascinating" camping grounds of the Jomon people were very near the village. In sharp contrast, they also visited the modern electric power plant on the island.

WHILE ON Mikura they stayed with Oba-san, a "very venerable old lady," and an ex-pearl diver. Her two sons had gone to Toyko to work, as had many of the other young people of the islands. Soon, according to Beech, with so many young people leaving, the islands may become virtually uninhabited.

The "teachers" not only instructed for four days on Mikura, but, in turn, also learned a great deal.

One story told to them by a government official dealt with an American ship loaded with Chinese coolies bound for the United States to work on the railroads. The year was in 1862 and the boat was just off the island of Mikura when it began to sink.

ONE CREW member fired a shot gun as the boat collapsed. The people in the village ran down to the rocky shore and rescued all the pas-

BECAUSE THERE ARE NO real docking facilities on the tiny Japanese island of Mikura, cargo must be brought in by dinghies launched from the shore. Walter Beech, Redwood High School senior, photographed this and other island customs during his brief stay there instructing Japanese students in English.

The crew and coolies finally did make it to America.

The people of the islands, Beech says, are fairly cultured. The volcanic eruption had caused troops to construct an airfield on the bigger island, thus providing a closer link with the more modernized islands.

On New Year's Day, however, the merchants still follow the custom of hanging bamboo strips outside their stores to ward off evil spirits. Now, Beech says, this is merely tradition, not belief.

JAPANESE MEN on Mikura were a study of concentrated attention and energy as they pulled a dinghy through the rocks onto the beach. There they unloaded bales of rice brought in by a ship which had to discharge its cargo farther out to sea, since there are no docking facilities.

THIS CARVED LION on guard against evil spirits at the entrance to a Shinto shrine on the tiny Japanese island of Miyaka caught the eyes of American visitor Walter Beech during his explorations.

TO BEECH, the most exciting occasions came when, in his 10th grade class, students would stray from the grammar he was teaching them. They were very much interested that Americans had come to the island, and became involved in such discussions as:

And, "What is the American reaction to the Vostok launching?"

Some students would ask their questions in English, others shy away from it. Beech and his fellow worker encouraged their students to speak English, emphasizing proper pronunciation.

ON MIYAKE, a great aid to empathy between students and "teachers" was the portable radio-phonograph Beech had with him. The students would come to his house on the island, to sit and listen to Harry Belafonte records.

One thing the students and "teachers" talked about was the Japanese recording of "Sukiyaki," which was a hit in the United States at the time.

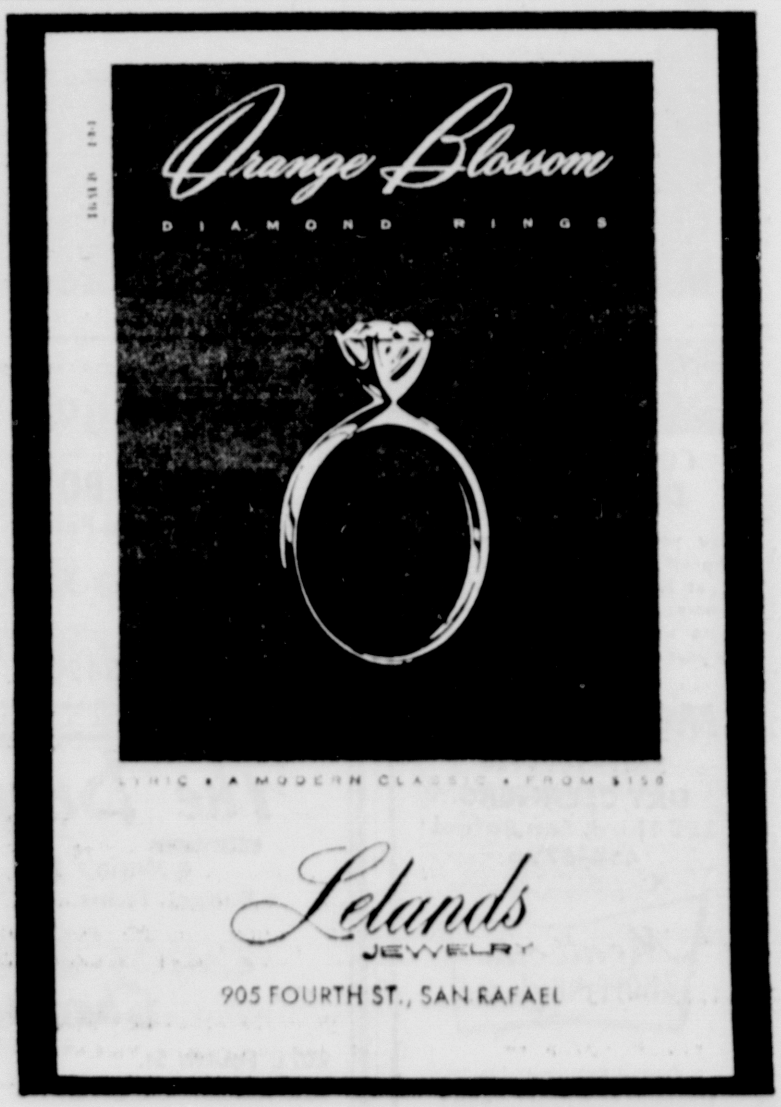

While on Mikura, Beech and Lee took a hike around the island during which Lee stepped on a five-foot snake. It was non-poisonous, adds Beech. He was planning to return with a katsudori or boobie bird egg he had gathered on the trip, "very special," he comments, but before he could get it home, it squashed.

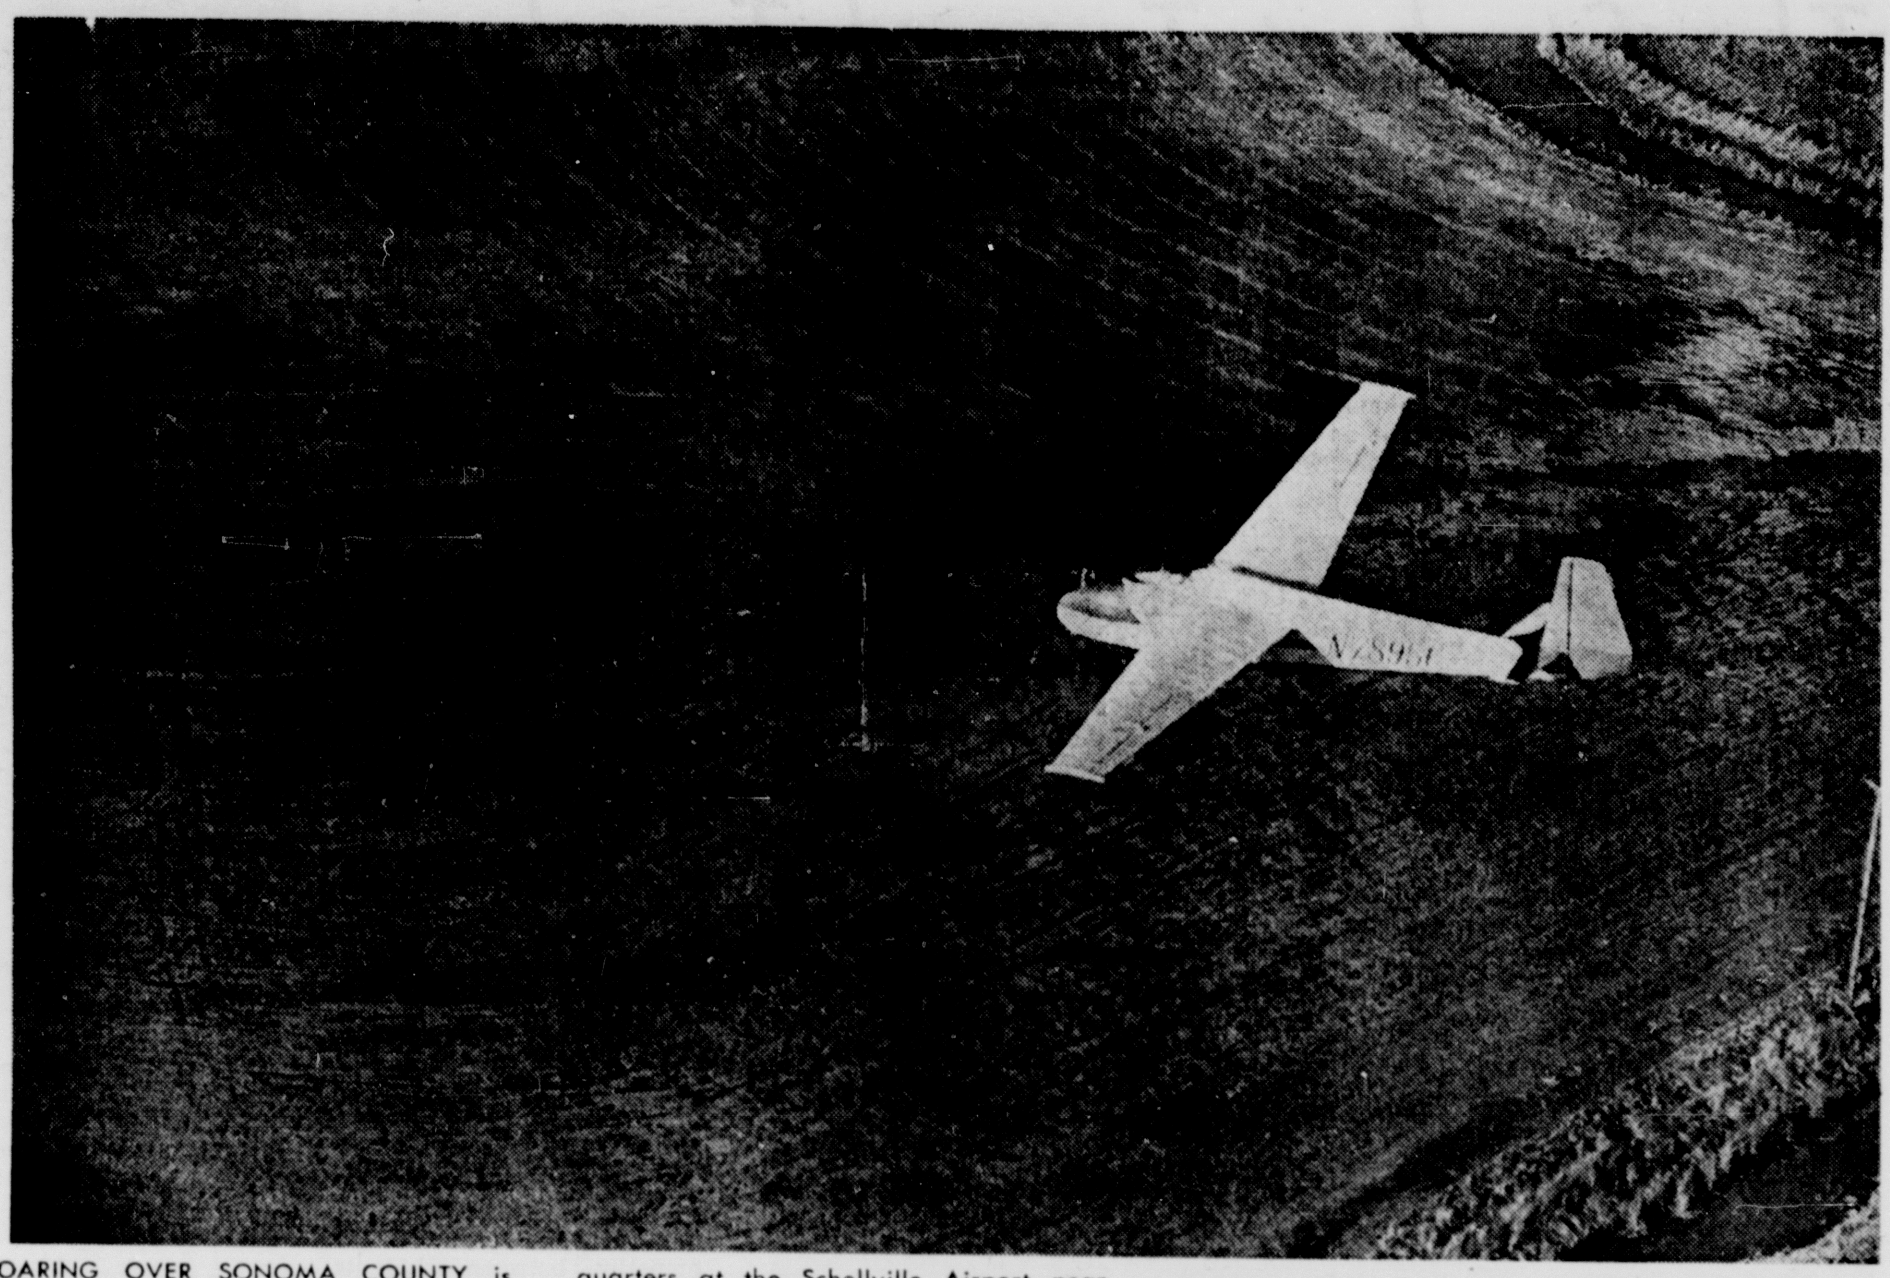

THIS CUTE youngster was one of the residents of a village of but 280 inhabitants on the island of Mikura, where Walter Beech spent a part of his two weeks as an English instructor.

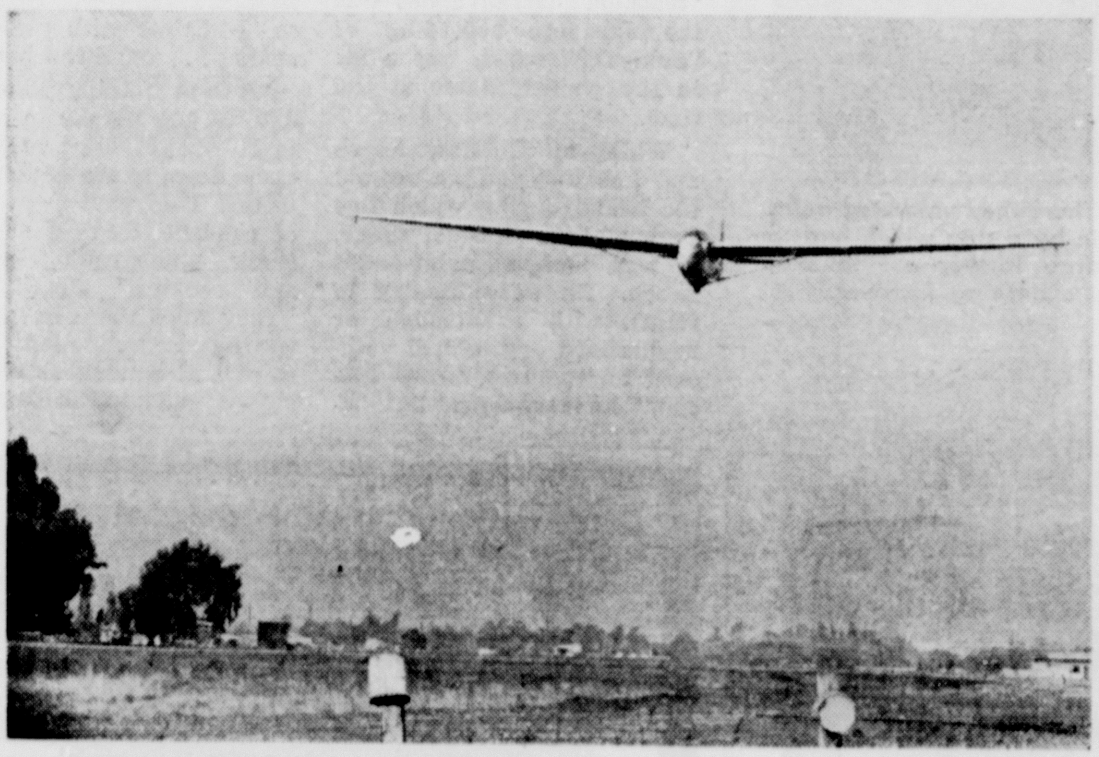

THE PILOT program was the start of an ambitious series of such expeditions which eventually will cover all the southern Japanese islands which Beech describes as "complete with poisonous snakes . . . and a few people."

"It was raining hard the day we left Miyake to return to Tokyo, yet 30 or 40 people came down to the dock to see us off. They gave us presents of embroidered napkins, shells, photograph albums and cookies," Beech says. "They stood there in the rain waving as we sailed. They were still waving as we lost sight of them in the distance."

SOARING OVER SONOMA COUNTY is Gunnar Anderson of Terra Linda in his Cherokee II, the sailplane he built himself. Anderson is a member of the North Bay Soaring Assn. Inc., a group of sailplane enthusiasts who have their headquarters at the Schellville Airport near Sonoma on Highway 37. There the members gather Saturdays and Sundays, weather permitting, to indulge in their favorite sport. The group owns a sailplane and a Piper Super Cruiser which serves them as towplane.

THE GRACEFUL bird-like swoop of the sailplane is a fascinating sight for the observer from the ground, as well as a thrill for the soarer riding the motorless craft. Using air thermals, the skilled pilot can fly more than 500 miles. And altitudes of nearly 45,000 feet have been reached by sailplanes utilizing a "wave" lift. Oxygen is the limiting factor here.

Soaring Enthusiasts Enjoy The Test Of Skill And Teamwork

Marinites Join In The Sport Weekends At Sonoma Airport

By LEE CADWALLADER

And when you talk to anyone who has ever been soaring in a sailplane, the description they try to give of their experience sounds much the same as the poetic image.

Soaring is to flying what sailing is to boating.

Sailplanes are what used to be more commonly called "gliders" — motorless, soundless, and fumeless. The skill, knowledge, and judgment of the pilot keep them up.

But getting the plane in the air demands team work from the ground crew, who help take the plane from the hangar, tow it by bus down the runway, jockey it into position behind the tow plane, attach the tow line, and then assist the pilot in entering the cockpit and fastening the canopy.

THE PILOT is dependent upon the tow plane ahead until he gains sufficient altitude to cut loose, usually at 2,000 to 4,000 feet.

After the sharp clank of metal released from metal, the sailplane shudders and he watches the tow-line snap away in the wake of the tow plane. Then comes the moments he has waited for all week. He applies all his knowledge of flying, aerodynamics and meteorology as he selects the best available method of staying aloft.

Gliding is just a matter of being towed up and coming down again, something that leaves most soarers cold. Real soaring is staying up as long as you can find an air current, through thermals, waves or off-slopes. The most avid and advanced soarers are interested in setting new records in altitude, endurance and distance.

IF HE IS skillful and lucky, the pilot can fly more than 500 miles on thermals. Some have been able to rise more than 1,000 feet per minute in them.

He can rise from 5,000 to 30,000 feet. Much higher altitudes have been reached in sailplanes in recent years utilizing the "standing wave" frequently found in the lee of ridges or mountain ranges. An altitude of nearly 45,000 feet has been achieved by a sailplane utilizing wave lift. Actually this lift frequently goes much higher, but that is the maximum altitude for conventional oxygen equipment in an unpressurized cabin.

Not many Marinites have had the opportunity to experience the thrill of applying the combined skills of science, art and sport in flying a sailplane, but the members of the North

The Poetry Of Motorless Flight

Bay Soaring Assn. Inc. hope to remedy that situation.

THIS CLUB, organized as a non-profit corporation to provide soaring facilities in the North Bay area, already includes nine residents of Marin as members. And if they can succeed in locating a flying field in Marin, the members feel certain other Marinites will be attracted.

Right now the club uses a Sonoma airport, but the members feel that Marin has one of the best potentials for a greater variety of soaring conditions.

The irregular terrain of Marin is helpful in developing the warm air bubbles called "thermals." There are also great possibilities for slope soaring, using the hills facing prevailing westerly winds.

Strong winter winds often associated with rows of lenticular (flat lens-shaped) clouds streaming out from Mt. Tamalpais are a sign that Marin would be an excellent wave soaring area, too.

SOARING FIRST developed as an organized sport in Europe, but California is now the leading soaring state in a U.S. in which the sport has grown rapidly.

In Europe, meadows and pastures are used. Any fairly level field 2,000 to 3,000 feet long will usually suffice for air-tow launching. For launching with a motor driven winch, a field 4,000 to 5,000 feet long is preferred.

The members of the North Bay Soaring Assn. have noted many meadows and large hilltops in West Marin that would make excellent soaring sites and would welcome an invitation to investigate them.

The home base of operations for this club is now the Schellville Airport, five miles south of Sonoma on Highway 37. Flying activities take place every Saturday and Sunday, weather permitting, and on week days as arranged by the membership.

THEY NOW own a Schweizer TG-2 sailplane and a Piper Super Cruiser, used for air towing and recreational flying.

Members either use the club plane or their own.

Gunnar Anderson of Terra Linda completely built his sailplane in a period of three and a half years. His interest, like many of the other members of the club developed by building model planes as a boy—they just kept getting bigger and bigger

MARIN POETS' CORNER

MY GARDEN

I love the corner of my garden
Where the dewy violets grow;
Shy, wistful maidens bending
To the mirrored pool below;
Where the "Yellow Basket" tumbles
In unrestrained delight.
I love my garden always,
But best of all at night.

Then the moon shines palely,
Paints a path across the pool.
'Tis here the fairies come a-dancing,
Because the garden's cool.
But when the dawn begins to break,
The fairies steal away
To wait beneath a lily-pad

TIPS ON EASY LIVING

How to own a home– but avoid the "homework"

Is your leisure spent in fun activities . . . or does "homework" swamp you?

If you're tired of playing nursemaid to a house and garden, investigate East Harbor Estates, where you eliminate chores through condominium ownership.

With neighbors to share the cost, you hire out the gardening, the pool cleaning, the building maintenance. It costs surprisingly little. And you are free to relax beside the pool while somebody else weeds the garden.

As a "chore-free" owner of a condominium residence, you retain all of the owner's advantages of income tax reductions and accumulation of equity. You buy, refinance or sell independently of your neighbors.

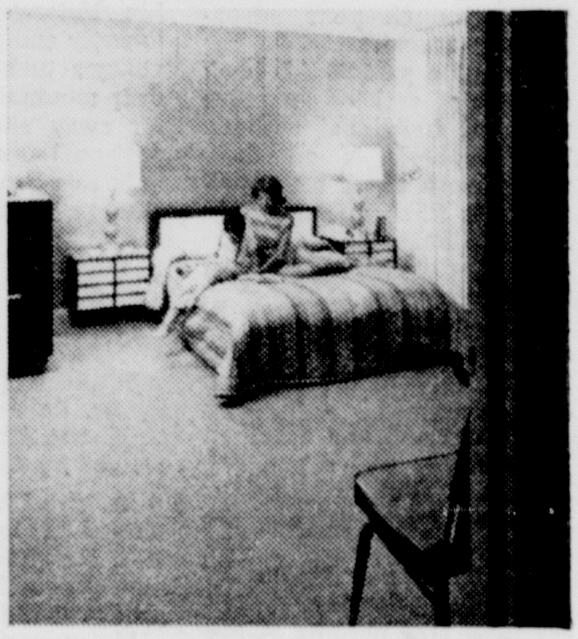

Yet those same neighbors share with you the cost of swimming pool, oriental garden and "tea house." Your swimming pool becomes a real bargain when you have full use of it but pay only 1/50th of its cost.

In ordinary home buying, incidentally, there are many quite expensive "extras" such as drapes and carpeting, a new refrigerator, laundry equipment, garden installation. But every one of these "extras" is included in the basic condominium price, and may be financed at a low 5¾% interest rate.

Condominium homes may be had in compact one bedroom units with large living rooms and fully equipped electric kitchens, priced from $14,950. Also 2 bd/2 bath units from $18,950. A few very large 3 bd/2 bath homes include fireplaces, and private sun decks from $24,650.

Financing is the best . . . 5¾% loans for 25 year terms are available to qualified buyers. Or, if cash is a problem, secondary financing may be arranged.

If funds are frozen in your present house, we will guarantee its sale within 60 days, or buy it from you at a pre-arranged net price. No uncertainty! No delay! Buy your condominium home today, confident that funds will be available when you need them. Ask the Salesman for details.

Our Reviewers Report On What's New

Literary Adventure

THE CONCISE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF MODERN WORLD LITERATURE, edited by Geoffrey Grigson, Hawthorn Books Inc., 502 pages, $15. Reviewed by Lee Cadwallader.

If you think that the only way to learn history is to study history texts, that the only valid sociological and psychological studies appear in technical reports, or that the only way to develop a taste for good art and music is by studying the works, then this is one book you won't need.

But if you've finally found a free moment when you can step off your professional treadmill long enough to feel an urge to know what of significance has been going on in the world, and what some of the most respected writers of our times are thinking about, then this book will provide you with a convenient guide through your adventures in literature.

The main part of this book consists of articles on more than 300 individual authors. The emphasis is on their works, with short biographical notes when necessary for illumination.

All of the contributions by outstanding men in the literary field take definite stands that lead you to study the original works. A thoroughly worthwhile investment.

A Charming Tale

JUNIPER LOA by Lin Yutang, World Publishing Co., 251 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Corena Green.

Set in Singapore in 1927 while China seethed with civil war, it is the story of Silok whose fortunes are in the big city but whose heart is still with his childhood sweetheart in the province of Fukien.

Silok has come to Singapore to study law. He graduates from the University of Malaya and is employed by a British law firm. He is handsome and his uncle has made a fortune in rubber during the first World War. Certainly he is a fine catch for a respectable Chinese girl chosen by his uncle from one of Singapore's richest and oldest families.

The rebellious Silok becomes infatuated with an Eurasian girl. This affair has ended long before Silok realizes it although it is painfully obvious to the reader. This seems odd, for the author portrays our hero as a singularly astute young man—yet he subjects himself repeatedly to hopelessly humiliating situations.

But always there is Juniper, married but raising her and Silok's son; both of them suffering until circumstances permit them to resolve their problems together.

Fukien is the birthplace of Lin Yutang and he writes lovingly and eloquently of the villages tucked away in the deep mountains. Singapore is far away and ugly by comparison, but necessarily there. It is this conflict in a world, soon to be even farther separated, which gives interest to the book.

Biblical Diagnoses

In this little book, Dr. Greenblatt looks at the Bible with the practiced eye of an endocrinologist. The result is scholarly and entertaining.

He suggests that Esau did not despise his birthright when he sold it to brother Jacob for a bowl of pottage. Esau could well have been suffering from a disease only recently defined, hypoglycemia or low blood sugar. "I am at the point to die," Esau says.

Dr. Greenblatt argues that this well might have been the case.

He also gives a diagnosis of wine drinking, of circumcision, mandrake roots, fasting and the great and small of stature. These are all documented with Biblical case histories.

Dr. Greenblatt's treatment is not coldly scientific. He has a doctor's feeling for humanity. He also has a deep feeling for the Bible as a vast source of investigation and inspiration.

IN A CHANGE OF PACE from his mysteries featuring Inspector Maigret, Belgium-born Georges Simenon has written a novel, "Three Beds in Manhattan," about two disillusioned people in New York. Simenon lived in the United States for several years, but now makes his home in Switzerland.

Life On The Trail

OVERLAND IN 1846: Diaries and Letters of the California-Oregon Trail, edited by Dale Morgan, Talisman Press, two volumes, 799 pages, $20. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The year 1846 saw a swelling westward migration split more heavily toward Mexican California than toward American-British Oregon.

It was the year of the "Hastings Cutoff" for the California-bound immigrants, the "Applegate Cutoff" for those who chose Oregon. It was the year of the Bear Flag Revolution and of raising the Stars and Stripes in California. And it was the year of the Donner Party.

It was also the year that found a growing number of chroniclers among the riders, the bull drivers and the drovers heading west. And to further mark their progress, there was for the first time a steady trickle going back across mountains and plains to the Mississippi—those who "had seen the elephant," and had enough.

Of the rich (though of course far from complete) records of that year's migration, my old friend Dale Morgan has filled two fat volumes that bring across the intervening decades a cumulative feeling of "the way it was on the trail" which no single narrative could hope to match.

Besides diaries, letters, and newspaper accounts from both ends of the long, long trail, the two volumes of "Overland in 1846" include enough of Morgan's own writing to set the stage and tie the parts together. And in a pocket in the back of volume I is the great four-part map of T. H. Jefferson of the "Emigrant Road from Independence, Mo., to St. Francisco," which was published in '49 in time for sale to a new breed of emigrants heading west with avid avarice stirred by the word, "gold."

Probably no one else has delved so long and deeply into the records of the old Far West as has Dale Morgan, who does research at University of California's Bancroft Library. He began his explorations into records of the past nearly three decades ago in his native Utah. Handicapped by loss of hearing, the young student found here a field in which his handicap was often in fact an advantage. He has become an authority on the history of the vast Pacific-sloped expanse that is now Utah, Nevada and California. And the love he holds for his work shines through the volumes he so carefully produces.

Talisman Press, at Georgetown, Calif., in the old Mother Lode, has taken upon itself the past few years the assignment of preserving the records of a California which time is fast obliterating from sight and memory. The two-volume "Overland in 1846" set comprises a worthy addition to its growing list of titles.

THREE BEDS IN MANHATTAN by Georges Simenon, Doubleday & Co. 190 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Jean Lyttle.

Two disillusioned people in New York, meet in the Village and, through their desperate loneliness, find a mature love. Their way is not smooth however, as suspicion and self-doubt beset them at the start.

Author Georges Simenon, who has written extensively in Europe and has enjoyed a considerable popularity with mystery fans in this country, tells this bitter-sweet story with a blend of cynicism and compassion. The characters are portrayed in a sensitive and realistic manner, with a distinct touch of the Continental.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE RANSOMED MADONNA by Lionel White, E. P. Dutton & Co., 187 pages, $3.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

In writing "The Ransomed Madonna," Lionel White began with this premise in mind: What would have happened if the Mona Lisa had been stolen while it was in this country on loan from the Louvre?

He makes one major modification in his starting point. The painting becomes a heavily-insured masterpiece on loan from the Vatican's collection of art treasures. It is stolen ingeniously from a New York museum to be held for ransom, and in the process the thieves unwillingly find it also necessary to kidnap an unwed mother and her newly-born baby.

With strong plotting and characterizations and with an aura of excitement from start to finish, the story has an admirable ring of authenticity. It is the "best yet" by this seasoned and accomplished writer of crime-suspense novels.

"WHY DID MY BLACK TAFFETA LOSE ITS BLACKNESS?"

Sometimes, as in the case of your black taffeta peplum, such a fabric will take on a sort of bronze tinge after repeated cleanings. This makes the black appear less black and is, naturally, disappointing.

This condition may be brought about by the loss of sizing from the taffeta. Some sizings used on these fabrics are slightly soluble in drycleaning solvent. After repeated drycleanings some of the "body" leaves the fabric and with it a small amount of the dye is lost as well.

Call this to the attention of your professional cleaner. His skill and knowledge should enable him to restore some depth of color to the black and add body and luster to your taffeta.

A Vivid Account Of Sepoy Revolt

By DON KEOWN

DAVID SARNOFF by John Tebbel, Encyclopaedia Britannica Press, 191 pages, $2.95.

Richard Collier's "The Great Indian Mutiny" is subtitled "A Dramatic Account of the Sepoy Rebellion." The emphasis might well be on that word "dramatic," for dramatic it is. It is also remarkable.

Collier's subject, of course, is the bloody revolt of native troops in Britain's Bengal Army that began in 1857 and continued into 1859.

His book differs from and is far superior to most historical work in several respects.

Collier is not content with telling you what took place. He tells you exactly what things were like while it was taking place. The smells, the sounds, the sights, the emotions are all there, described with a richness of detail that stamps Collier as a gifted writer.

Another uniquely Collier approach to history writing is to pitch his story on a personal level. By following individuals along the paths of history, he makes his chronicle a very human and very real thing. Sometimes the individuals he spotlights are of great significance, sometimes of less significance, sometimes only typical.

Such a method requires tremendous research, well beyond the relatively simple probing of previously published historical works and the official records in the archives. Personal diaries, letters, recollections had to be mined for the light the people who lived through those terrible days could shed upon the events.

What emerges is history with much greater dimension than that to which we have become accustomed. War as it is related here is no battle of wits between opposing generals, manipulating armies of thousands like chess pawns.

Nor is it sheer pageantry of charging horses and heroic men. Nor is it a dry compilation of victories and defeats, casualties and captured citadels.

What it is is men and women suffering and dying, some heroically, some in fear. It is carnage and decay. It is man at his courageous best, and man at his worst committing the foulest of atrocities. It is man existing at the animal level, man existing in luxury on the spoils of war, and man ceasing to exist at all.

It remains to be seen what kind of a reception Collier's book will receive from professional historians accustomed to less passionate, mustier tomes.

But if there is any justice, the book will be welcomed with open arms by the general reading public. It is history told the way it should be told—in the terms of the men and women whose blood was spilled and whose bones were smashed and whose flesh was torn and seared. It is frequently unpleasant to the point where it may be too much for the squeamish. But perhaps it is time our squeamish faced up to the fact that war, then and now, is no game nor spectacle, but rather mass and mad slaughter that makes a mockery of the term "civilization."

Squeamish or not, we recommend you read "The Great Indian Mutiny." And stick with it through the gore and grief all the way to page 383.

No Alger hero ever did a more impressive job of lifting himself by his own bootstraps than Sarnoff, who rose from penniless immigrant boy to the nation's greatest communications magnate.

Tebbel tells the story in an interesting though non-critical manner. The book is part of Encyclopaedia Britannica's "Great Lives Series" intended primarily for teenage readers, but not unpalatable for the more adult. Like most of the books in the series, this one tends to overlook personal shortcomings and minimize mistakes and failures. It seems to be the practice to honey-coat biographies of the successful when they are aimed for the young, apparently on the premise that the youthful lack the maturity to absorb such criticism and place it in its proper perspective.

Thus you do not get the idea here that you might acquire from other sources that Sarnoff is often regarded as domineering and even arrogant and officious. We would like to have read a good deal more of Sarnoff's theories on TV programming, for while he and NBC-TV are responsible for many of the best things we have, there is, nevertheless, still great room for improvement.

Still, Tebbel has written a book which should be inspiring to our youth, telling as it does what happened to one man of exceptional ability and ambition. And if some facets of the complex Sarnoff personality are left unexplored, others are illuminated, including Sarnoff's adventurous earlier years, his close kinship with science and the scientist, his optimism for the future, his interest in youth. He is a "self-made man" in the best sense of that often misused phrase. And while conditions have changed a great deal from the years in which he "made it big," there is still opportunity for more of his mettle. The odds, however, have lengthened.

THE MOST CONTROVERSIAL book of 1963 and a runaway best-seller, Rachel Carson's "Silent Spring" has now been published as a 75-cent paperback by Fawcett World Library as part of its Crest series.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

JIMMY SMITH — ANY NUMBER CAN WIN—Verve Stereo V6-8852:

Absolutely the most ferociously swinging jazz electric organ I've ever heard!

The title tune is from an MGM movie. Some sizable groups assist Jimmy in these sessions, most of which are in a hard-swinging "down-home" groove. The stereo sound recording is superb and every one of the ten tracks comes on like gangbusters.

The jazziest vocal trio in jazz is here combined with Coleman Hawkins' tenor sax and Clark Terry's trumpet, together with an appreciative Newport Jazz Festival crowd for a real rouser. "One O'Clock Jump," "Watermelon Man" and "Gimmee That Wine" are some of the best.

Victor's thoughtfulness in including lyrics with the liner notes is responsible for correcting my previous impression that "Cloudburst" was simply a nonsense song.

If you don't own any LH&B lp's as yet, this one would be a fine introduction.

All of the seven tunes are by Ellington — showing his versatility as a tunesmith—and all the piano accompaniment is by Ellington. Louis handles the vocals in his usual gravel-voiced style, and then usually solos on his famous trumpet. Ellington does not try anything fancy, just letting the tunes and Louis speak for themselves.

Stereo Hi-Fi

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

Last week's article described that professional tapes are available in different lengths on the same size reel, accomplished by using tapes of different thickness; and are available with two basic types of backing material, the standard plastic variety and the extra strong mylar variety. For ordinary use, the standard plastic tape of the length required is a good choice. For the longer and therefore thinner tapes, as well as for tapes that will be used or stored in locations where there are high temperature and humidity conditions, the mylar or polyester backed tapes of the length desired should be used.

What about the iron oxide that is cemented to the backing material? Are there differences? Why shouldn't cheap tape be used? The most important part of recording tape is the oxide. This is the thin layer that becomes magnetized during the recording process. This layer of oxide is extremely thin, by the thickness must be held to very exacting tolerances; that is, it must be precisely the same thickness throughout its length and width. Variations in thickness will cause differences in frequency response noise, and volume level. Another extremely important feature of the oxide is its actual makeup. The oxide must have a lubricant built in to prevent the wearing out of the heads of your tape recorder. The oxide must be made up of extremely fine and polished particles to prevent abrasive action and wear on the heads of your tape recorder. The oxide must have an overall polished smoothness and must not rub off onto the recorder heads. The oxide must be evenly coated on the backing material without any minute areas where the oxide is missing. These no-oxide areas will cause momentary drop-outs of the program material.

All of the professional grades of tapes discussed above and in last week's column have exactly the same high quality and precise oxide regardless of whether the backing material is plastic or mylar. It should be mentioned that the surface of the backing material must be extremely smooth to allow for the oxide layer to be coated on evenly.

The cheap variety of tapes offered to the public will cause excessive head wear to your tape recorder, will give poor overall frequency response, and will have more background noise than high quality tape. These conditions are caused by the roughness of the oxide, and lack of adequate lubricants built-in.

Keeping Busy In Your Garden In February

There's something really fascinating about starting plants from seed. True, it may be more practical to use seedlings from the nursery for most things, but do try some seeds for the fun of watching the full plant life cycle. Godetias, candytuft, alyssum, calendulas, sweetpeas, radishes and parsley are excellent to try because they are pretty surefire. Kids love the experience of planting seed. However, get snail and slug bait from your nurseryman before the seedlings emerge, so you don't have them eaten overnight.

There is nothing as delicious as freshly picked fruit or vegetables when you've grown them yourself. Swiss Chard is one of the most rewarding of the vegetables we can plant for home consumption, and the red-stemmed kind is decorative as well. Curly-leafed parsley, the fronds of carrots are handsome grown among your ornamentals — and eventually you can eat the chard, decorate food with parsley (and it is very good eating, too), enjoy the carrots.

February is a good time to prepare the soil you will need for potting plants a little later in the year. Not all plants like the same mixture, but nearly all will do very well in one composed of one-third ordinary garden soil; one-third sharp builders sand; one-third humus of some sort. This gives the mixture plenty of body to hold the water yet insures good drainage — just what most plants want.

The temptation in planting annuals is to attempt too many different things and not enough of one thing. Plan beds for annuals so you have a real display—of zinnias or marigolds or petunias, for example—and can keep cutting flowers for use as decorations. The best way to get started is buy seedlings from your nurseryman where you know the plants are disease-free and certain to grow well.

Do not reuse your clay pots without first cleaning them thoroughly. A solution of clorox or the like in water — two or three tablespoons to the gallon will do — should be used. Check them for cracks. Replace doubtful or damaged ones.

Sharpen your tools now before the big spring outdoor season begins. Hedge and pruning shears should be sharp so they don't bruise the bark of the limbs you prune —and because it makes pruning easy. If your tools need replacing, see a nurseryman or garden equipment dealer.

A ZIG-ZAG garden bench built of Douglas fir two-by-fours will make the perfect yard divider. The bench can be used between patio and garden, or to separate distinct use areas. When visual screening is needed, as for children's play yard, add a high backrest or simply set a louvered screen directly behind the bench.

And Let's Also Take The Time To Plan For The Future

Gardening Page

While winter in Marin is far from bleak, it does provide us with at least a little time to sit down, contemplate our handiwork and plan for the future.

There are very few things as rewarding as a well-planned garden.

The first step is to pay a call on your nearby nursery. The nurseryman may suggest you call in a landscape architect or he may sit down with you and work it out in detail —filling in suggested names of plants.

But you can enjoy the fun of planning too. The important steps are these:

1. Make an outline of your property to scale. If you get it down on paper it's very easy. And once you see on paper the relationship of your house and surrounding land you can make sensible plans.

2. Before you start laying out your garden, discuss just what it is you want. Is it to be a quiet, sheltered garden where you will have a few friends from time to time and otherwise raise your pet plants? Is it going to be more open—a place where many people can gather, barbecue steaks, play badminton, etc? Do you have to plan for children? A place where kids can skate or climb or ride bikes and a place where adults can have a little respite? It makes a whale of a difference in the layout of your yard just what purposes it has to serve. Once you have that clearly in mind . . .

3. Decide where the permanent structures should or must go. A patio normally is an extension of the house, hence is located near the side or back door. But this is not an inflexible rule. Maybe you have an old tree you want to retain and you want your patio under it so you must settle for a path from rear door to patio. It doesn't really matter as long as the result is what YOU want—not what someone else says you ought to have. Walls, pergolas, fixed planter boxes, play equipment —these things should be spotted where they are going to stay. Once you put down that slab of cement it's pretty hard to uproot.

4. Indicate where you think you'll want the "permanent" plant items — this would include trees, lawn and most shrubs. It is true that you can move some plant material—if you find something clouded your vision when you were planning, but it isn't advisable. Indicate your permanent plantings on the plan. Your nurseryman can tell you where the plan can be improved. And if you've made the very common mistake of wanting a tree that will grow to 80 feet when full-size and your yard can only take one of 40 feet, he can tell you what tree and variety of substitute. But at this juncture just indicate you want "a tree," "a lawn," "a garden bench," "a bedding plant area."

5. Once you have all the permanent structures and plants on your plan you can make as many plans as space permits for the more transient annuals, bulb beds, vegetable patches and the like. In doing this it is wise to allow plenty of room for the plants to grow Those tiny bedding plants that come to you four inches high, grow to be big plants—the zinnia, the dahlia, the delphinium. Whatever you plant, always remember to give it enough room to reach its normal height and width. (This is very true of your shrubs, naturally.) An excellent way to see whether the curves of your walks or lawn or whatever, will look right is to use the hose to make an outline. If possible get up high (a second-story window?) and look down on your pattern. It is easy then to make adjustments and get a fairly good idea of how the overall design will look when complete.

6. Select your plant material. Try to get some idea of what you would like by collecting the names of trees and shrubs grown by friends, neighbors or even strangers who have what you find beautiful. Then you can take your plan and your ideas to your local nurseryman. He will be able to correct your mistakes and make suggestions for new and improved plant materials you may never have heard of. And he can give you any advice you need on how and when to plant.

You will find that trees and shrubs start small, so for the first year or two you may need more annuals than you will later on. Your nurseryman will be able to help you pick the ones for the various seasons. There are some good books (read those for California, not the East), of course, but in the end the nurseryman knows best.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

- Don't hesitate to get gladiolus planted. Dust them with a fungicide first. Then sit back and wait for the big show.
- In case you didn't get around to it last fall, it's heartening to know that ranunculus and anemones can go in now. Be sure to plant ranunculus with the claws down.
- Roses, grapes, berries, fruit trees, shade trees, flowering trees . . . everything that is solid bareroot . . . should be put into the ground now.
- Transval Daisies are among the loveliest and most sophisticated of flowers. Plant with crown at least a quarter inch above soil. Blooms in spectacular colors starting around May.
- Perennial phlox can go in now. If you live where it gets very hot, put them in light shade or plant them on the east side of a house or wall. Elsewhere, full sun.

Caulking Compounds Will Keep Out The Water And Cold Air

Handyman's Page

Caulking compounds are used to seal gaps in construction so as to prevent water, cold air, dust and insects from entering a building.

TYPICAL PLACES which require caulking include the space between window frames and door jambs and adjacent siding or masonry; joints between masonry blocks, junctions of porch floors and building walls, junctions of columns with floors or porch ceilings; flashings and fitting around chimneys and pipes that protrude through roofs; junctions of framing and foundation; butt joints of clapboard, joints between cornices and walls, spaces around glass block installations; the junction of metal walls and masonry foundations, and so forth.

Traditionally, caulking compounds are a plastic-like semi-solid made of a blend of pigments, oils and thinners. More recently synthetic sealants have been introduced, which have a longer life. Unlike putty which dries hard, caulking compound retains its resiliency throughout its life.

Caulking compounds come in several types or grades: Gun grade, knife grade and rope caulk.

Gun grade caulking compound is meant to be used in a caulking gun which extrudes the material through a nozzle when the trigger of the gun-like applicator is pressed. It comes in standard cans and drums and in cartridges for use in home-type guns.

THE LATEST packaging developed is in the form of tubes with attached nozzles through which the caulk is squeezed, thus eliminating the need for a gun.

Knife grade caulk is made for application with a putty knife or spatula and is generally for filling nail holes or other small holes and for large joints where gun grade caulk may sag or slump.

Rope caulk comes in long strands which are pressed into place with the fingers and can be used wherever gun grade caulk would be. This type product is non-drying and is liable to pick up dirt and should be painted. It can be easily removed by simply stripping it away.

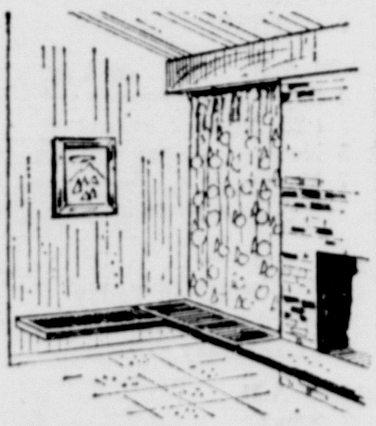

BEFORE ANY type caulking compound is used, the areas to be caulked must be free of dirt, dust, moisture and grease. Gaps deeper than five-eighths inch should be partially filled with oakum before the compound is applied.

When applying gun caulk, hold the gun at a 45-degree angle to the surface in the same plane as the gap to be filled. Do not hold at right angles to the crack. All joints or beads of caulking should be at least three-eighths inch deep.

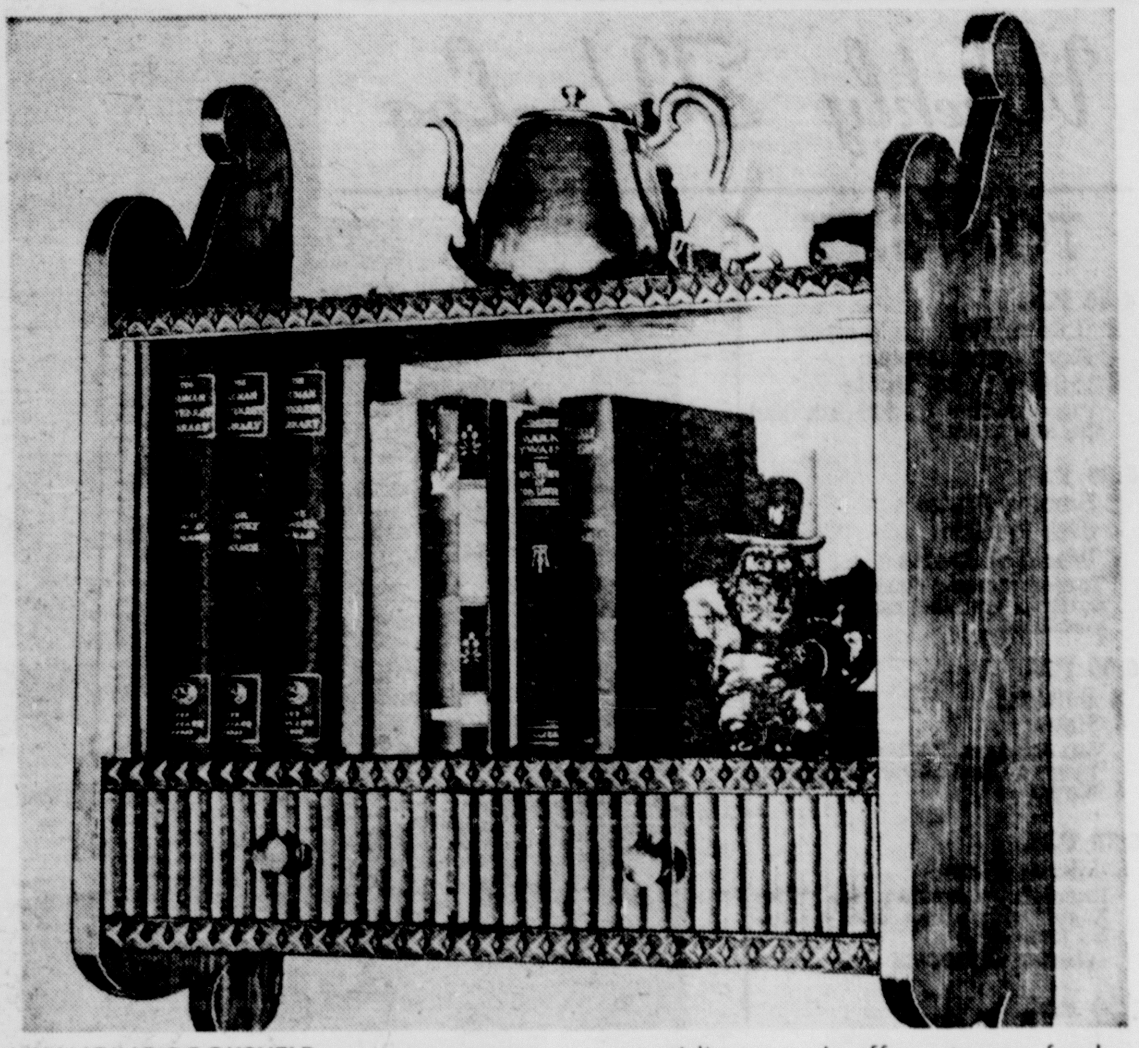

There are two types of caulking guns. In the first, the cylinder is loaded with bulk caulk from the container. In the second type, the gun is loaded with a cartridge of compound. The average cartridge will fill 10 to 15 linear feet.

THERE ARE other special formulations available for particular specialized uses.

These include marine caulk for boat repairs above and below the water line; bath tub caulk made to seal the space between the walls and tub, sinks and shower stalls; painters' caulk which is used to fill wall cracks and openings inside the home before painting; driveway sealer for filling cracks in driveways, and shingle tab cement used to seal down shingles to prevent wind damage.

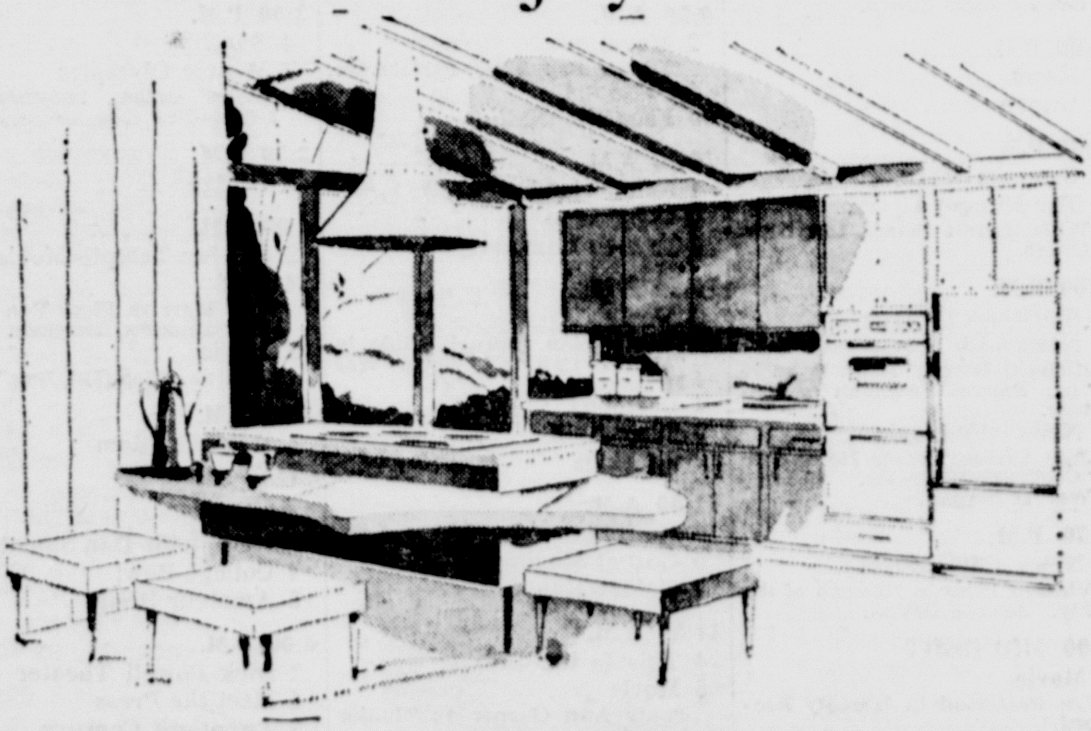

A FIREPLACE wall can be emphasized by the building of a cantilevered bench as an extension of the raised hearth. The bench uses one-by-two and two-by-four lumber, either Douglas fir or hemlock, to match paneling on the adjacent walls

A HANGING BOOKSHELF can prove a most versatile addition to your home. No room or hallway is ever out of bounds as far as a book or knick knack shelf is concerned. Over a stove, it keeps your herbs and seasonings within convenient reach. In a teenage girl's room, it offers storage for her cosmetics. It is easy to build with the help of the pattern. Just send 50 cents to Independent-Journal, Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., and ask for Hanging Bookshelf Pattern No. 21.

Meet the furniture designed as contemporary art! See Modern Artisan at Bellach's, and add a dramatic new dimension to your life. No other furniture expresses you so well! Artistic use of Carpathian Elm accents the contemporary art style of this tasteful bedroom. Note how the muted Velvet Walnut veneers are contrasted by the design of the bronzed drawer pulls. Kroehler expresses contemporary art in this modern Artisan suite—and expresses your hoped-for wish by putting this fine furniture within your budget!
